PREFACE

This Manual for the Rosenzweig Picture-Frustration Study, Adult Form, now complements the Children's Form and makes available for use in India a standardized adaptation of both forms of this widely used semi-projective instrument. Similar adaptations are available in French, German, Italian and Japanese to supplement the original American versions.

The present Indian adaptation results from a substantial piece of work, based on 800 adult subjects. This investigation has been carried out by the two first-mentioned authors; the writing of the Manual is also primarily their responsibility, though they have drawn freely upon the American Manual. But a number of improvements have been introduced in this edition, notably, in regard to a new and more consistent terminology for the Types and Directions of Aggression.

It is hoped that this instrument will find many uses in India, as it has already done in other countries, in clinics and hospitals, schools, industry, culture studies and in general psychological research where it is important to evaluate patterns of reaction to frustration—the modes of aggressive response.

I GENERAL INTRODUCTION

The Picture-Frustration Study was developed as a result of experiments with repression and frustration carried out by Rosenzweig. The various investigations by Rosenzweig (1936, 1938, 1943) led to a theory of frustration (Rosenzweig, 1938 a, 1944) which formed the basis of explorations in the direction of frustration reactions. Rosenzweig's test for frustration had an earlier and simpler version (Rosenzweig, 1943), the first section of which was developed into a full-fledged technique, the Picture Association Method. In order to specify his own technique he termed it as "Picture-Association Study for Assessing Reactions to Frustration", which was shortened to "Picture-Frustration Study" and is now popularly known as the P-F Study.

The first paper introducing this new technique was published in 1945 (Rosenzweig, 1945). This technique "stands midway in design between the word-association and the thematic apperception techniques. . . . The technique thus retains some of the objective advantages of the word-association test while at the same time approaching to a degree the molar aspects of personality, which the TAT is intended to probe" (Rosenzweig, 1945 p. 3).

The Rosenzweig P-F Study may be said to be a controlled projective technique, primarily intended to measure reactions to frustration situations. Originally the Adult Form was introduced (Rosenzweig, 1944 a) which was later revised (Rosenzweig, 1948) and then was followed by the Children's Form (Rosenzweig, 1948 a). The method has some distinct advantages with children. To them such an approach could be expected to appeal as a game in much the same way as they are intrigued by the numerous comic strips designed for their enjoyment. Moreover, one could reasonably anticipate that they would "project" more naively than do adults. These advantages seem to work with adults also.

Each form of the P-F Study consists of 24 cartoon-like drawings representing frustrating situations. One character in the drawing is shown saying something that causes frustration to the other person depicted. The subject is required to say or write what the other person would say in that situation. In the Children's Form the frustrated individual is always the child. The Study can be administered individually as well as in groups.

Effort has been made to include in both forms of the Study, samples from every day situations of life. A variety of needs have been covered in the Study—the needs of approval, affiliation, inviolacy, freedom, nurturance etc.—and at the same time various types of frustrating situations have been involved, e.g., deprivation, conflict, and accusation. In both forms there are “ego blocking” as well as “superego blocking” situations. The former are those in which some obstacle, personal or impersonal, interrupts, disappoints, deprives or otherwise directly frustrates the subject, while the latter represent some accusation, charge or incrimination of the subject by someone else.

Several noteworthy accounts and reviews of the P-F Study have appeared (Buros, 1953; Buros, 1965; Clarke, 1951; Kramer, 1963; Kramer, 1965; Rosenzweig, 1953; Rosenzweig, 1949; Watson, 1957). A critical and compact review of the researches done on the P-F Study (Mirmow, 1952) contains a good summary of the various works. A review by one of the authors (Parck, 1959 b) provides summary of the studies. The most recent and exhaustive review is in French (Kramer, 1965). Three exhaustive bibliographies on the P-F Study are available (Parck & Rosenzweig, 1959; Buros, 1953; Sumid, 1956). Besides these, Rosenzweig has been issuing mimeographed bibliographies from time to time. A survey of the work with the Children's Form may be found in the paper by Rosenzweig (1960).

II

THE INDIAN ADAPTATION

The original Children's Form of the Rosenzweig P-F Study was standardised for use in India (Parck, 1959). Encouraged with the results of the Children's Form, the Adult Form was also adapted and standardised. While preparing the Indian adaptation, care was taken to retain the original situations with as little modification as necessary to make the situations acceptable in the Indian culture. However, many more changes had to be made in the Adult Form than were made in the Children's Form. In addition to changes in the paraphernalia of the pictures, e.g., clothing and furniture, changes were made in the captions of some pictures. Moreover, some situations had to be completely changed.

In almost all situations minor changes were made in dresses and other appearances. However, in 9 situations major changes were needed. These changes were as follows :

Situation No. Situation in the original edition Situation in the Indian adaptation

The first edition was administered to 53 adults and was revised to give the second edition which is published now, excepting for a few minor changes made later. The final adaptation was standardised on a population of 800 adults. Details about the age and sex of the sample are given in Table I.

Both stability and scoring reliability of the Indian adaptation of the Adult Form were determined. (The details are discussed in a separate paper, Pareek & Devi, 1965). The scoring reliability was found by comparing the scoring by two independent scorers was quite high; the percentage of agreement increasing to 98 after discussions. Reliability co-efficients both for matrix reliability and item reliability were quite high. Stability co-efficients ranged from .27 to .82 and consistency values from .46 to .74.

Like the original study, the Indian adaptation consists of 24 situations depicted in cartoon-like pictures, each depicting two persons who are involved in a mildly frustrating situation of common occurrence. The figure at the left of each picture is showing certain words which either help to describe the frustration of the other individual, or which are themselves actually frustrating to him. The person on the right is always shown with a blank caption box above. Facial features and other expressions of personality are purposely omitted from all the pictures. The subject is instructed to examine the situations one at a time and write in the blank box the first appropriate reply which enters his mind.

The situations are both ego-blocking and superego-blocking types. Ego-blocking situations are those in which some obstacle, personal or impersonal, interrupts, disappoints, deprives, or otherwise directly frustrates the subject. Superego-blocking represents some accusation, charge, or incrimination of the subject by someone else.

Sixteen situations (1, 3, 4, 6, 8, 9, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 18, 20, 22, 23, 24) may be said to be of the former type; and eight (2, 5, 7, 10, 16, 17, 19 and 21) of the latter type. One significant relationship between the two types of situations consists in the fact that in superego-blocking, there is usually some implication of previous ego-blocking with the present frustrator as formerly frustrated. The distinction is not to be regarded as absolute since the subject may interpret a superego-blocking situation as ego-blocking, or an ego-blocking situation as superego-blocking. In these exceptional instances the score, as always, must follow the bent of the subject.

The Picture-Frustration Study can be used for a variety of purposes some of which are indicated towards the end of the Manual.

III

INSTRUCTIONS FOR ADMINISTRATION

Like the original form, the Indian adaptation is intended for use with adults, but can be used with adolescents also. The Study can be administered in about 20 minutes, either individually or in groups. For clinical use, individual administration is preferred because of the opportunity it provides for 'inquiry', making scoring and interpretation much more reliable. Even when administered individually, the subject should write the responses himself.

Both in individual and group administration, the subject should write his own answers on the standard P-F Study Booklet. The use of substitute answer sheets may modify the results. It has, for example, been shown (unpublished American work) that oral administration where written is possible yields more censored responses. In order that total time may be recorded as well as to deter subjects from revising their first responses, subjects should be told to raise their hands (or give some other signal) on completing the answers; the tester then collects the Booklet.

The P-F Study Booklets are first distributed (when administered in groups) or given to subjects (when administered individually). The tester then reads out the instructions from the cover page. The subject or subjects listen to the tester and also read the instructions themselves. The instructions are as follows:

In each of the pictures in this booklet two people are shown talking to each other. The words said by one person are always given. Imagine what the other person in the picture would answer and write in the blank box the very first reply that comes into your mind. Work as fast as you can.

The main purpose of the instructions is to orient the subject away from any self-critical attitude and toward a more 'objective' identification with the anonymous figures in the pictures. In this way, the subject tends to project and perhaps reveal his own underlying modes of response in the depicted situations. To encourage such an orientation, the instructions insist upon the first association, since less censorship is apt to intervene under these conditions. In the administration of the Study, it is, therefore, important to demonstrate with the first picture the manner in which responses are to be arrived at. After the instructions have been read with the subject, he is asked to open the Booklet, examine the first situation and think of the first reply that the character in the picture might give. He is instructed to write down his responses. He is then told to proceed with the other pictures similarly and is left on his own.

There are some important points in connection with the administration of the P-F Study. It is necessary that the subject responds to the pictures in the same sequence in which they appear in the blank, since the analysis of trends, to be described later, depends upon this order. This should be made clear orally during the instructions. It should also be made clear that no situations are to be left unanswered.

The total time taken by the subject in completing the Booklet should be recorded on the cover page. In individual administration, the subject, after the completion of the Booklet, should be asked to read aloud the responses he has written. The examiner should note any significant voice inflections and can ask nonleading questions in order to obtain more adequate information for scoring purposes.

In cases where the answers are too brief or ambiguous inquiry should be used to amplify them for their possible scoring. The inquiry may also suggest to the examiner if a response is based on some emotion not suggested by the original words, as reflected in the subject's voice. Finally, the inquiry sometimes affords the necessary information for the intrinsic combination scores, to be described later.

IV

GUIDES TO SCORING

The same approach is used in scoring both the Adult and the Children's forms of the P-F Study. The principles were worked out by Rosenzweig on the basis of his theory of frustration (Rosenzweig, 1938 a, 1944) and the experimental work done in that connection (Rosenzweig, 1936, 1938, 1943).

GENERAL PRINCIPLES AND DEFINITIONS

It is assumed as a basis for the P-F Study that the subject unconsciously or consciously identifies himself with the frustrated individual in each pictured situation and projects his own bias in the replies given. To determine this bias, scores are assigned to each response as to direction of aggression and type of aggression. Under direction are included Extraggression or E-A—in or I-A—in which it is turned onto the environment; Introggression or M-A—in which aggression is evaded in an attempt to gloss over the frustration. Under type of aggression are included Obstacle-dominance or O-D—in which the barrier occasioning the frustration stands out in the responses; Ego-defence or persistence or N-P—in which the solution of the frustrating problem is emphasized; and Need-persistence or N-P—in which the ego of the subject predominates; and Need-persistence or N-P—in which the solution of the frustrating problem is emphasized. From the combination of the three categories in each of the two chief dimensions, there result for each item nine possible scoring factors (and two variants—E and J). For scoring purposes, the letters E, I and M are employed to signify the three directions, Extraggressive, Introggressive and Impulsive responses of aggression respectively, in whatever combination with type of aggression. To indicate Obstacle-dominance an apostrophe (') is written after the capital letter E, I or M. The Ego-defensive types of extraggressive, introggressive, and impulsive responses are signified by the capital letters E, I and M, used alone. To indicate Need-persistence small e, i, and m are employed. The convention has been adopted of writing Obstacle-dominance first, Ego-defence second, and Need-persistence third in a three-columnar arrangement: O-D/E-D/N-P. For example, a response requiring a score for impulsive Obstacle-dominance and introggressive Ego-defence is indicated by M'/I. Similarly, persistence—the score is written / e. When, as occasionally happens, it is necessary to score for two factors within a given column, a semi-colon is used to separate the symbols, e.g., /E;M/.

Some changes in the P-F terminology were introduced earlier by Rosenzweig (1960). A few others are added here. However, the new terminology does not involve any change in the scoring system; it is meant only to help clarify the conceptual framework.

The new usage substitutes "type of aggression" for the previously employed term "type of reaction". The implication is that Obstacle-dominance, Ego-defence and Need-persistence are all to be regarded as forms of aggression. This clarification implies a prior one according to which aggression must be clearly distinguished from hostility as only one mode of aggression. Generally aggression is closer to enterprise or assertion than to hostility, though dynamically oriented psychologists, in particular, have often concentrated their attention upon the negative species of the genus.

In the present context, a distinction is definitely intended between constructive or positive and destructive or negative aggression, the former being conceptualized as Need-persistence and the latter as Ego-defence. Obstacle-dominance would then represent a type of aggression in which the response is curtailed or inhibited before either of the other two modes can be actuated, possibly because of a conflict between them. The three directions of aggressions are now designated as extraggressive, introggressive and impulsive, and the previously employed terms extrapunitive, intropunitive and impunitive are used only for the Ego-defensive responses of the three directions. In the combination of the three types of aggression with the three directions, it now becomes possible to provide a consistent terminology as follows: extrapunitive, intropunitive and impunitive would refer only to the three directions of Ego-defensiveness, while for the three directions of Obstacle-dominance the terms extrapulsive, intropulsive and impulsive would be employed, and for the three directions of Need-persistence the terms extrapersistent, intropersistent and impersistent would serve.

The Superego deviants of extrapunitive (E) and intropunitive (I) may be designated as D-E and D-I, implying that these are "denial variants" of the two factors.

Brief definitions of the 11 scoring factors, including the two variants, follow:

Extrapulsive or E'

The presence of the frustrating obstacle is insistently pointed out.

Intropulsive or I'

The frustrating obstacle is construed as not frustrating or as in some way beneficial, or, in some instances, the subject emphasises the extent of his embarrassment at being involved in instigating another's frustration.

Impetitive or M'Extrapunitive or ED-E or EImpunitive or ID-I or IImpunitive or MExtrapunitive or EImpetitive or IImpetitive or M

NUMBER OF FACTORS TO BE SCORED

The scoring of most responses requires only one factor. Two distinct phrases or sentences are usually necessary for the assignment of scores of more than one factor; exceptions will later be noted. Occasionally a third factor seems to be indicated, but these cases are rare and can safely be treated as two-factor combinations with the predominant factors being scored. When a question arises as to the number of factors to be used, the simpler scoring is to be preferred.

If the minor part of a response serves merely as an introduction or explanation for the obviously stronger statement, the factor for the minor element is absorbed by the major emphasis, "O.K." or "I don't care" prefixing extrapunitive responses are such examples for introductory remarks which are usually casual and are omitted in the final score.

A special case is the intrinsic combination score employed for responses in which underlying trends—usually compensatory in nature—affect the necessary scoring. This score is enclosed in a rectangle to indicate its unitary nature. In general, "deep"

The obstacle in the frustrating situation is minimized almost to the point of denying its presence.

Blame, hostility, etc., are turned against some person or thing in the environment.

In this variant of E, the subject aggressively denies that he is responsible for some offense with which he is charged. (Most often applicable to superego situations)

Blame, censure, etc., are directed by the subject upon himself.

variant of I in which the subject admits his guilt but denies any essential fault by referring to unavoidable circumstances. (Most often employed in superego situations).

Blame for the frustration is evaded altogether, the situation being regarded as unavoidable; in particular, the "frustrating" individual is absolved.

A solution for the frustrating situation is emphatically expected of someone else.

Amends are offered by the subject, usually from a sense of guilt, to solve the problem.

Expression is given to the hope that time or normally expected circumstances will bring about a solution of the problem; patience and conformity are characteristic.

interpretation is not recommended; scoring should be based on the explicit meaning of the subject's words. Occasionally, however, the underlying trends are thinly veiled and essentially manifest, in which case they are encompassed in these intrinsic combinations as, for example, the following:

(a) [E:I] indicates aggression against another person, based on underlying doubt of the speaker's own adequacy, e.g., in situation 20: "Obviously they have more interesting company".

(b) [M'E]

indicates reduction of frustration by attacking or belittling the desirability of the original goal ("sour grapes"), e.g., in situation 20: "Who bothers? I'd never like to have friendship with such persons".

CHOICE OF O-D, E-D, AND N-P

Problems may arise in the choice of the proper scoring factor and certain general principles have been found to apply to a number of situations. Within a given response, after a subject has indicated in his response that he is blocked by the frustration (O-D) he may go on to attack others or himself (E-D) or may go even further to some solution of the problem (N-P). The practice is to favour the later factor, developmentally speaking, when a choice is in question. For example, in deciding between E' and E or between M' and M, it has been found that the Obstacle-dominant elements of a response are usually absorbed by the Ego-defensive ones. In scoring such responses the possibility of an O-D score should, of course, be considered, but if strong evidence of Ego-defense is present, the response is to be scored in the E-D column. This problem arises only in blended responses which seem to involve both factors. If the response consists of two definite statements, both factors should, of course, be used.

EXTRAAGGRESSIVE SCORES

E' is employed for statements stressing the severity of the frustration, or showing irritation rather than blame, guilt, or constructive solution (e.g., in Situation 3: "Yes, I wish the Sardarji removed his turban before entering the hall.")

E is used when aggression towards the person is evident without any guilt or inferiority. In scoring profanity it is necessary to distinguish between cases where the subject protests against inanimate objects (the key in No. 17), or fate ("Damn it!" or "We are unlucky") and situations in which aggression is directed specifically toward other persons ("Damn you!" or "You are very careless"). The former responses are scored E', the latter E.

c is used when the speaker demands action on the part of the other person for solution of the problem, or insists the problem be solved the way he desires. This score is also used for specific constructive suggestions which do not show aggression (e.g. in No. 11 "Please ask someone else").

Responses showing persistence or tenacity sometimes present a problem as to whether the score should be E or c. When the demand for assistance is outright and explicit, c should be used; otherwise the score should be E. For example, in Situation 3, the response "I wish the Sardari removed the turban" is scored E, but the response "I shall ask him to move a bit" is scored c. In Situation 9 the response "But I am late" is scored E, because there is no explicit request; "I want it just now" is scored c, because the request is explicit. If, however, the persistence becomes defiant, involving perhaps refusal to conform, the score is E. Similarly E is employed when the response accuses the frustrator of discrimination.

INTROGRESSIVE SCORES

I is used in scoring responses which deny the existence of any frustration; this denial is frequently in the form of a refusal to let others know of the speaker's concern and presumably arises out of a need for punishment. Thus, in Situation 22, the response, "Not at all" is scored I. Similarly the response "You are mistaken. That is why I have won" is scored I. Another type of response which requires this score expresses martyr-like insistence that the frustration is really of advantage to the speaker; here an effort is apparently being made to divert attention from the subject's difficulty. A blended response which includes strong evidence of overt guilt feelings as well as I is discussed above.

I is used when responses show speaker's remorse, guilt or regret. However, when the conventional expression of sorrow accompanies the offer to amend the situation, I alone is sufficient (e.g., "I am sorry. Tell me how I can compensate" in No. 2). In case the expression is more than conventional both I and c are to be given. Response emphasising the speaker's activity to solve problem are scored c.

INGRESSIVE SCORES

M is used for responses that minimise the frustration, indicating no embarrassment and unimportance of the situation, while

M is used for responses that "explain" or excuse the situation, m indicates acceptance of the situation and conforming to it. Scoring of conformity responses, however, needs some attention. When the conformity is direct and unqualified, m is used alone, e.g., in Situation 6: "Then I'll obey the rules", or "Issue two and retain the third." If the response contains a request for permission or satisfaction now with a promise of compliance later, c is combined with m in the score; e.g., Situation 6: "I will bring the two back tomorrow". Similarly compliance now may be made a basis for satisfaction later, e.g., Situation 13: "Can't you spare a few minutes? If not let it be some other day". If the conformity is qualified, more or less ungraciously, by some indication of the discomfort that will be involved, the scoring becomes E//m. Examples are found in Situation 6: "Then I'll have to take only two", and in Situation 13: "I've wasted my time. When shall I see you then?"

Certain expressions that seem to minimize the sense of frustrations are sometimes found to introduce a response in which a solution (N-P) is the predominant aspect for purpose of scoring. "All right", "O.K." etc. are such phrases which do not provide sufficient evidence for the inclusion of the factor M, though they would be scored M if found alone. The four situations 1, 6, 13 and 24 most commonly elicit these expressions.

SCORING OF SUPEREGO SITUATIONS

Special problems are encountered in scoring the superego situations. For example I is an appropriate score for responses which would be scored E in other situations, since consternation in these situations is due to the speaker's reaction to something he himself has done, while in the ego-blocking situations it refers to what others have done. Thus in Situation 2, "Oh, how awful" or "I wish I had not done it" is scored I. Another variation in scoring superego situations occurs when the speaker believes the damages which he himself has done and for which he has been called to account. This reaction is obviously impertinent and, therefore, is scored E rather than M; e.g. in No. 2: "Don't worry. Throw these pieces out."

In super-ego situations it is possible for the speaker to make an excuse either for himself for having done the original wrong or for the other person's aggression in having brought it to his attention. It should be noted that the former type of response is scored I and the latter M. For example, in Situation 10 "I just wasn't careful about what I was saying" is scored I; "You have misunderstood me" is marked M. This distinction illustrates the similarity between these two scores which differ mainly in direction.

THE USE OF THE INQUIRY

The Inquiry is intended to verify responses which are too brief or ambiguous and, therefore, need amplification before they can be scored. The Inquiry may also be used for clinical purposes of a thorough analysis of any significant change in the tone of the subject or of the meanings the subject assigns to the responses etc.

When a situation is descriptively misunderstood, the response cannot be scored in the ordinary fashion, though such misinterpretations may be qualitatively revealing of the personality. When misunderstandings arise, it is the function of the Inquiry to reveal them and to elicit a response to the intended meaning of the situation.

If the test has been administered to subjects in a group, the advantages of the Inquiry are usually sacrificed. Under these circumstances it is necessary occasionally to mark a response as unscorable either because of its ambiguity or because it obviously reflects a misinterpretation of the pictured situation. If a response has been erased or crossed out and another substituted, the first response should be scored, if it can still be deciphered.

SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS

In some situations scoring of responses involves special interpretation of the scoring factors. The meanings of the factors have been explained in such cases through special instructions that appear at the end of the scoring samples. These may be carefully read before scoring the responses.

V

SCORING SAMPLES

In order to facilitate scoring of responses, scoring samples for each situation are reproduced in the following pages. These samples are based on the records of 800 adults of both sexes. The responses are reproduced almost in the form in which they were given by the subject; no corrections in the language have been made. Many responses were new and were not obtained or thought of in the original American edition.

In a few cases where no samples were found in the actual responses to illustrate particular scores, samples have been borrowed from the original American manual; to distinguish, these have been placed in parentheses.

A consistent numbering system has been followed for the sample responses, reproduced below. This may be useful in locating responses of a particular kind.

The scoring samples have been prepared carefully after several discussions among the authors. The sample will be found useful in scoring responses which may be identical with those given here. They will also serve as guides in cases of differences in wording, but having similar meanings. The definitions of the various scoring factors and the principles on which they are based should be carefully followed and applied while scoring responses.

SITUATION No. 2

A hostess is expressing consternation at a guest's having broken her mother's favourite vase.

1. E//

2. /E/

3. //e

4. I//

5. //i

7. M//

1. Are you really cross with me for breaking it?
1. Now it cannot be amended. No use crying over spilt milk.
2. What can I do then? Did I do it intentionally?
3. Never mind.
4. Thank God it was not yours.
5. Don't worry. Throw these pieces out.
1. Now bring another from your mother.
2. (There probably is another one just like it you can buy).

1. I wish I had not done it.
2. I wish I'd been more careful.
3. I wish I'd never done such a great loss to you.
1. I am very sorry
2. I am extremely sorry for having broken it.
3. I am very sorry, please excuse me.
4. I am really sorry and hope you will accept my apologies.
5. Is that so? I'm so sorry.
6. Please excuse me. I know it was my mistake.
7. I am sorry. I am always clumsy.
8. I am extremely sorry. I was somewhat careless.
9. I am sorry such a precious thing has been broken by me.
10. I'm very sorry to tell you the vase fell from my hands and it is broken.
1. I am sorry. It was an accident.
2. I am so sorry. It slipped from my hand.
3. I am sorry. I was just trying to set flowers and it slipped.
4. It was most unintentional.
5. I could not help it.
6. I had no intention of breaking it. It fell by chance.
7. I am very sorry. Though - I tried.
8. My hands were oily and it slipped.
1. What should I do now?
2. (I'll replace it for you)
3. I am sorry, I'll replace it.
4. I am very sorry, I shall ask excuse from your mother and apologize.
5. I am so sorry. I think I should go to your mother and apologize.
6. I am very sorry. Now tell me what to do.
7. I am sorry, tell me how to compensate.
8. I am sorry I shall be careful in future.
1. It is not broken.

4. Excused.
1. I understand you could not avoid it. So there is nothing to be sorry.
2. This sort of thing does happen in this season.
3. No mention!
4. Forget it!
5. Please don't bother!
6. It was not intentional on your part.
7. Oh! It is alright. Mistakes are made by everyone.
1. (It will dry in a minute.)

COMBINATIONS

1. Ah! What have you done? You've spoiled my clothes. Can't you drive carefully?
2. Do it again! I'll be happy to reach office late.
1. That is O.K. I'll go and change again, though I was in a hurry.
1. Oh! It does not matter. But I wish you could have saved the situation.
2. It's alright. I've spoiled my clothes, but I know it was only accidental.
1. It is alright. Now what can be done?
2. It is right now. What is done is done.
1. But why did you have a rash drive? You must compensate for my clothing.
1. It does not matter, but at least you should take care of others.
2. That does not matter. Please be careful now that you do not splash others.
1. You should have been very, very slow. Then this would not happen. Anyway, it is alright.
1. Does not matter. We should not be sorry about what has happened. But try not to do that in future.
2. Thanks for your courtesy. Please be more careful.
3. Never mind, it is chance. But it is good to be careful and vigilant.
1. Alright if you are sorry.
2. I accept your apologies. Be careful in future.
3. Oh. It is alright. Try to avoid it.
4. That is alright. But be careful in driving hereafter. Pay a whole attention to pedestrians.
1. Does not matter. I am also sorry I bothered you.
2. It is good. These clothes were already dirty. But do not have such fun with everybody.
1. O.K. It does not matter. But please do you mind leaving me at my place if you are not in a hurry?
2. Never mind. It was not intentional. I'll change my clothes.
1. It is perfectly alright. I can go and change.

1. Yes, it's really sad to hurt your mother's feelings.
 1. I'm sorry for the loss. But what can be done by being angry about it?
 2. But why did you keep it on the edge of the table? I am sorry to have broken it.
 1. You see I was helpless. Moreover, all things are perishable. It was to be broken sometime or other. It was just by chance. Such things one expects at time.
 1. No matter. Have another. I'm sorry for this.
 1. I'm very sorry. I'm always very clumsy. I wish I had not done it.
 2. I'm very sorry indeed. I should have been more careful.
 1. Do not be so angry. I'd no idea of doing it. I feel much sorry for it.
 2. Sorry, miss. I did not know it was your mother's vase.
 3. I'm awfully sorry, but I did not do it intentionally it just slipped from my hand. I'm sorry.
 1. I'm extremely sorry. I wish I could get one to replace it.
 2. I am very sorry, specially as it is your mother's favourite vase. Can I replace it?
 3. I am terribly sorry. I wish I could do something. My father is good at fixing things. Perhaps he'll do it, though it won't be as good as new.
 4. Shall I try to put the piece together? I should have been more careful.
 5. Excuse me, madam! It won't happen again. I know how favourite it was of your mother's. I'm very sorry. I'll try to get another like it.
 1. I am sorry if you are really hurt by this. I'll pay for this, but I did not break it intentionally.
 2. I'm sorry it slipped. I shall replace it.
 3. What could I do when it fell from my hand? But my wages.....
 4. I don't know how it happened. I'll take care in future.
 1. Don't be afraid. I'll buy a similar set.
 2. Don't worry. I'll replace it for a similar one.
 1. It was good on your part to break your mother's vase.
 2. Well, it is my daughter's mother's vase.
 3. My mother's things are mine too. I must warn you not to repeat it. Be careful.

All these imply misunderstanding of the situation, and hence scored U—Unscorable.

SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS

is indicated if the speaker belittles the damage since the damage has been done by him and the response is therefore impertinent: "No use crying over spilt milk".

is used when the expression is more than conventional, showing the speaker blaming himself "I am extremely sorry for having broken it."

alone is sufficient scoring for conventional expression of sorrow accompanying the offer to amend the situation, like "I am sorry, Tell me how I can compensate" or "I'm very sorry. I shall ask excuse from your mother". In case the expression is more than conventional, /I/ is used: "I'm extremely sorry. I wish I could get one to replace it".

SITUATION No. 3

A girl is remarking that her companion, seated in a theatre behind a man with a big turban, cannot see a thing.

1. E//
1. Because of the Sardarji in front of me!
 2. The Sardarji's turban is blocking my view. What can I do!
 3. O! Yes! due to his turban!
 4. Yes! I wish the Sardarji removed his turban before entering the hall.
 5. This man with big turban is hiding everything. I wish he wasn't sitting here.
 6. I know! I wish all tall people were given the last rows!
 7. Oh! For the turban of Sardarji!
 8. I know!
 9. Yes!
 10. We are very much at the back.
 11. It is a pity indeed!
 12. It is very unfortunate!
 13. Well, it is very bad!
 14. The scene is not clear at all and seating arrangements not proper.
 15. Yes. Nothing is clear.
 16. Yes, my view is blocked.
 17. But it is not visible.
 18. What a nonsense! After wasting so much money, we are unable to see. This man is quite tall.
 19. No, I can't.
 20. I just didn't see it.
 21. Yes, we can't see a thing.
 22. I'll get a sprained neck at this rate.
 23. How can I? Just see this man.
 24. Of course, I cannot.
 25. Yes. I can hardly manage to see.
 26. It is all useless. We are wasting our time.
 27. Really!
 28. Not a bit!

The driver of a car is apologising to a pedestrian for having splashed the latter's clothing.

SITUATION NO. 1

1. E//

2. /E/

1. I wish you had avoided it.
2. Gosh!
3. (I'm sorry too. The suit is new)
1. You should have horned and I'd have got out of the way.
2. It is alright, sir. It is quite what one expects of a motorist.
3. It is not your fault. You owners of cars always do this.
4. But you could have been more careful.
5. Can't you see properly?
6. Why are you driving so rashly? Can't you see?
7. Can't you be careful?
8. Yes. Must be sorry. Can't you drive carefully?
9. You ought to be.
10. You foolish man! It is all your fault. You do not care for others.
11. You idiot!
12. You Shameless man!
13. Motorists always think they own the road.
14. You rich people always ignore us who walk on foot.
15. Oh! You are sorry!
16. Oh! a fine excuse!
17. Alright. But mind you do not splash another. Keep your eyes open.
18. No use saying sorry.
19. Of course, but you should be very careful in future.
20. You should be more careful.
21. Shut up! You are responsible for it.
22. You should have done it in time.
23. You should have seen it before, bloody fool!
24. Nonsense! Try to drive carefully.
25. Your being sorry won't make amends for it.
26. Don't be so rash in driving.
27. This is no excuse.
28. Well, that is really bad. You should not make a rush like that.
29. O! Drive slow!
30. Why do you use the word "we" instead of "I"?
31. Thanks for the trouble you have taken to realise your mistake.
32. How hasty of you not to slow the speed when you know there was mud-water and someone is passing!
33. It is alright now, when you have spoiled it.
34. You are pretending. Otherwise you could have avoided.
35. I'll just see you.
36. Yes. That is the way you beg excuse, when you offend a person.
37. Never you tried!
38. Why have you splashed my clothing?
39. Sorry! Nonsense! Why didn't you stop?
- Didn't you see me standing here?

40. To hell with your sorries? You've spoiled my clean clothes.
41. Are you blind? See what you have done!
42. There is no use feeling sorry now. You have spoiled my nice clothes. You better be careful on the road.
43. Well, it is very sorry of you to spoil my clothes.
44. It's alright. But you must have some civic sense.
45. It is alright, though you hardly look sorry about it.
1. Oh! would you arrange for some water?
2. Will you take me home?
3. You should pay a rupee to get the clothes washed.
4. Please do not repeat the same to anybody.
1. Does not matter. It did not hurt me.
2. It does not matter much.
3. Never mind. It is not a very serious matter. Go on.
4. It's alright. I don't care much for the clothing.
1. The fault is equally mine, because I came just near your car.
2. Well, it is my mistake. I ought to be careful. Do not mention.
1. It is alright. I'll get it washed.
2. It is alright. I shall go home and change.
1. Oh! That is perfectly alright. I was only going home.
2. Never mind. It is alright. I'll have a nice wash at home.
3. That is good. These were already dirty. We had good fun.
1. It is alright. Don't worry.
2. That's alright.
3. It is alright now.
4. Never mind.
5. Alright, never mind.
6. Does not matter. It is alright.
7. After all, you did not do it intentionally.
8. It is perfectly alright. I know it was unavoidable.
9. I understand! it was not your fault.
10. Oh! It is alright, since it could not be avoided, as you say. The P.W.D. should mend the roads.
11. Do not be so sorry. It is alright.
12. It is alright when you tried to avoid the puddle.
13. It is alright. Go ahead.
14. O! That is alright. I suppose it couldn't be helped.
15. It is alright. I do not mind.
16. You need not be very sorry, gentleman!
17. Never mind. Take it easy.
18. Does not matter. Carry on.
19. Don't be sorry, as you have tried your best to avoid the splash.

2. /E/

29. The light falling on the screen is very dim.
30. When a sardari is sitting before you!
31. Yes I see! a human head with a turban!
32. We are not seeing anything

1. That man with the big turban! The Cinema halls should prohibit turbans.
2. These turbans are a nuisance.
3. O! How these people are sitting! They don't worry about others!
4. Tall people should sit on the back seats.
5. The organizers should have made better arrangements.
6. As if you can see everything.
7. As if you can.
8. You too cannot!
9. Don't whisper, but look on the screen.
10. The arrangements need improvements.
11. It is not my fault.

2. /E/

1. I can't help it.

3. /I/

1. I know. Shall I ask him to remove his turban?
2. Shall I ask him to move a bit?
3. Please lower your head or slightly move to one side.
4. I'm requesting you to let me see that.
5. Tell that man politely to lower his head.
6. Please, can't you move your head?
7. Can you please move on one side?
8. Sardari, can you please change your place?
9. Why don't you change your seat, Sardari?

4. /I/

1. Yes. We can
2. The whole scene is so clear.
3. I am seeing it.
4. No. I can see it alright.
5. It is so clear.
6. This is alright.
7. Now I'm seeing.
8. Surely I can.
9. O! Yes!
10. (I hate to ask him to remove his turban).

5. /I/

1. O! I've no glasses with me.
2. I was somewhere else. Excuse me.
3. Yes. I've some defect in my eyes.
4. I was thinking of something else.
5. No, no, I was just seeing the other way.

6. /I/

1. You change place with me, for I think I can see things.
2. Let me try!
3. Let us try again.
4. But we should try to see.
5. I am trying to see it.

7. /M/

1. It is not that bad.
2. I see a something.
3. O! no! we are seeing and thinking over it.
4. Of course we can, but not quite clearly.

8. /M/

5. It is not very difficult.
6. No, I can, only that thing is eluding my eyes.
7. Don't worry. I've managed to see.
8. I can, at times.
9. I can see a little.
10. But I can imagine it.
11. No matter. We'll enjoy sitting only.
12. At least, you can hear the sounds.
13. We can make out something.
14. We can see each other.
15. We can see something, though not exactly what it is.
16. I can see a little, but not fully.
17. Yes. Now I see them. Yes. Some more.
18. We can see, but not very interesting.
19. I don't mind.

9. /I/

1. Don't be surprised. Sometimes it happens by chance.
2. There is nothing to see there!
1. Have patience.
2. You'll see after sometime.
3. You'll soon get adjusted.

10. E:/E/

1. These Sikhs with their turbans are a hindrance. This turban on his head is blocking my view.

12. E//e

1. The fellow's turban is in the way. Shall I ask him to put his head on one side?

13. E:/I/

1. No. I can see. But the pictures are not clear. They are blurred.
2. You can, but not clearly. Something wrong with the form.
3. Yes. We see some half-drawn pictures.

14. E//I/

1. We chose the wrong place. We're sitting at the back of these tall people and they are obstructing our view.

16. E//i

1. Because of a tall man in front! But I'm trying somehow or other.
2. You cannot see because of this tall man in front. Come, you occupy this chair. You will be able to see much better.
3. No, it is just as bad from here. Would you though prefer to change places with me?
4. I shall try to see what I can.
5. I can see, but I've to bend my head on one side.
6. Never mind, I'm trying my best to see whatever I can.
7. I can—bless me—but when I try hard.
8. I'm to take trouble to see.
9. I've to shift my chair.
10. I know he is too tall. I'll see from this side.

17. E:/M//

1. I can see something, but I cannot make out.

18. E//M/

1. Yes, as a man with turban is sitting in front. After all, he can't help it.

19. E//m 1. Because Sardarji is sitting in front. Anyway, it is a public place. Let us enjoy this uncomfortable experience.
33. //e:i 1. Yes, I can't. But let us make an agreement. Sardarji may see from one side, I will see from the other.
40. I//i 1. No. I can. I've only to tilt my head.
47. //i/ 1. I am sorry. I'll go back.
54. M//E/ 1. Now it is alright. I can see in this position. Actually, these tall persons should sit at the back.
62. /M/e 1. That is because of this tall man in front. It can't be helped. I'll ask him to lean a little to the right.
63. /M/i 1. Yes but let us not quarrel in the hall. I can see the thing through one side.
67. U 1. It will be very good if you see. Don't worry about me.
2. I wonder why.
3. Are there some reasons for it?
4. Yet it is true I've eyes.
5. Then go ahead.
6. Can you?
7. Tilt your head towards me.
8. What?
9. What thing?
10. What are you talking about?
11. Why?
12. Not only when you are blind, but also when the sight is not clear.
13. No. Where, it is?
14. It is out of sight. I think no body can see it.
15. Sorry madam.
16. Don't worry.
17. Things far off cannot be seen.
(In many cases the subject has misunderstood the situation)

SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS

is employed for statements showing irritation, rather than blame or constructive solution. "Yes, I wish the Sardarji removed his turban before entering the hall".

may be used for such statements "These turbans are a nuisance". "Tall people should sit on the back seats" in which the reference is to the turbans or people in general, causing annoyance.

is employed for statements making direct requests which absorb annoyance: "Will you please move? We can't see at all". The second part of the statement is an explanation of and is absorbed by the first one, and so E' is considered absorbed by c.

is used for denial of any frustration: "Yes, we can", or betrayal of embarrassment "I hate to ask him to remove his turban".

SITUATION NO. 4

A man who has taken his friend in a tonga to the railway station is apologising because he couldn't get a tonga in time and made him miss the train.

1. E// 1. What to do now?
2. Now, what am I to do?
3. It's alright. But imagine how much I lose by missing this train.
4. Now how'll I reach? I'd some work to do.
5. Hard luck!
6. Very bad, of course!
7. To-morrow I'll not be able to go to my office.
8. Yes, I'm disappointed. But what can be done now?
9. What can be done now? Thing is, I'd an important piece of work.
10. Oh! But it will cause a great loss to me.
11. My children must be waiting. I've sweets for them.
12. We got late and missed the train. This train at all costs.
13. It is very bad, as I wanted to catch this train at all costs.
2. /E/ 1. What can we do now? But you must have tried in time.
2. Why couldn't you bring a faster conveyance?
3. We should have taken some other conveyance.
4. Be more careful in future.
5. Nothing else could be expected from you.
6. Nothing new for Indians. But they should try to get rid of this habit.
7. Yes. You are very irresponsible.
8. But you must have been back in time, so that I could have tried some other means.
9. No. You didn't perhaps keep pace with time.
10. You should have been quicker.
11. You should repent for it with me.
12. You should start your work earlier.
13. But why did you show so much carelessness? It is irritating.
14. Why could you not get it?
15. No use crying over spilt milk.
16. That is what is expected of a friend like you.
17. I've learnt a lesson of not coming to you again.
18. Couldn't you hire a quicker conveyance?
19. You should realize your responsibility.
20. You'd have better got a taxi instead.
21. Now, no use repenting. You should have started well before time for searching the tonga.
22. Shame in what sense? You ought to feel sorry for this. Please try to avoid such occasions.
23. You might have been sensible enough to bring some other conveyance.
24. You should be careful and expert in your work.
25. You are always like that.

26. Inefficiency somewhere.
27. It's a shame for me to have depended on some one else.
28. What can you do instead of this?

3. //c

1. Well, you'll have to take me back to your house.
2. Now tell me what to do
3. You can compensate by immediately hiring a cab for me.

4. I//

1. Don't worry. I think there was some good behind it, to miss train.
2. It is good. I'll enjoy another day with you.
3. There lies something good in it.

5. //l

1. You need not be sorry. I asked you late to bring a tonga.
2. I'm too cautious.
3. Don't you worry. I myself started late from home.

6. //h

1. Let us try if we can get a bus.
2. It is perfectly alright. I'll walk a few steps and take whatever vehicle I get.
3. It is alright. I shall go on foot.
4. Doesn't matter. We'll try for the next.
5. I'll go by bus.
6. I'll try some other means to reach.
7. Let's see if we can get a bus to reach in time.

7. M//

1. I'll be in time by the next train.
2. I do not mind missing trains, if I have something better to do here.
3. I don't mind.
4. It does not matter much. I am not in a hurry to go.
5. Does not matter. I can wait for two hours and catch the Flying Express to be in time.

8. /M/

1. Doesn't matter. I understand.
2. It was not your job.
3. But how can you help it? You took lots of trouble.
4. Does not matter. Thanks for the trouble you took.
5. Doesn't matter. I'm satisfied, because I think you tried your best.
6. It happens sometimes.
7. It is no matter of shame. What could you do when you were helpless?
8. The wisest man is he who realizes his mistakes. Do not feel anything. I like persons like you.
9. You did your best. Please don't take it that way.
10. Nothing to be ashamed of. I'm thankful you tried your best.
11. Let this thought go. It was not your fault.
12. Don't worry. What cannot be cured must be endured.

9. I //m

13. You should not be shameful. You and me are the same.
14. If you didn't get, how can you help? That's alright.
15. No question of shame as you tried your best.
16. Never mind.
17. Does not matter.
18. It was not your fault. So, why are you feeling so sorry?
19. It is none of your fault. It is very difficult to get anything, because of the rush.
20. It is alright. What else could you have done?
21. It is alright dear. Do not reproach yourself.
22. Leave it for any other time.
23. I'm on the other hand thankful to you, because you obliged me.
24. Past is over. Do not bother about it.
25. Life is like that now-a-days.

10. E//E/

1. I'll go tomorrow.
2. Anyway, I'll catch the next train.
3. It's alright. I shall go by the next.
4. I'll take the next.
5. We'd better go home and remember to come back in time for the next.
6. It's alright. I'll wait in the waiting room and catch the next.
7. Doesn't matter. I'll go by the next.
8. When does the next train leave?
9. Let's enquire when the next train leaves.

COMBINATIONS

12. E//c

1. Do not make such excuses. You do not realize I had important work.
2. A very common neglect, which is disheartening.
3. Well, I've to suffer for it. You better go home.
4. You fool! I had some urgent work.

13. E; I//

1. Now what has happened is very bad. I've to reach soon. Can you suggest some remedy?
2. I was in a hurry. But what can be done now? Now tell me please when the next train leaves.
1. What can happen now? Perhaps this is for the best. I'll spend one more day with you and I like your company.

14. E//l

1. I should have sent you earlier. Now it can't be helped, to be.
2. I should have seen to it myself. Anyway, it wasn't my fault. Had I known it, I'd have arranged it myself. It was so urgent.

16. E//i

1. Now I'll be late for the appointment. I'll try the bus.
2. I've missed my train and will never be late in future.
3. Anyway, I've to hurry to catch the bus.

17. E; M//

1. Yes, I have to wait for the next train.

18. E'/M/

1. No, Don't worry. It was not your fault, though it was very important for me to catch the train.
2. You tried to get it, but you could not get one.
3. Nothing to be sorry for now.
4. You tried your best. It was my bad luck.

19. E'/m

1. Nothing can be done. I'll wait for the next.
2. Gosh! I don't know what to do. Let us go back.
3. What cannot be cured must be endured.
4. It's too bad. You know how much trouble I've to undergo now. I wonder when the next train is.

21. /E/e

1. Forget the past. Now let me know what train goes next.
2. I'm very sorry to hear it. Please arrange something.

23. /E:/

1. You alone are not responsible. I should have made haste also.

27. /E:/

1. I'll manage to go by another train. But never do such a thing in future.

29. /E:/M/

1. It happens when you are too affectionate.
2. You should have tried earlier. But it is alright now.

31. /E/m

1. No use to be sorry now. I'll catch the next.
2. No use crying over spilt milk. Let us make the best use of our time.
3. You could have tried for a longer earlier, now let us wait for the next.

34. //e:m

1. There can still be another train—Can't there be?

40. I'/i

1. It's alright. I'll get the bus which is cheaper.

49. /I:/M/

- (It's just as much my fault as it is yours. We should have left earlier)

51. //l/m

1. I am to blame, as I did not get ready early. I'll travel by the next.

61. M'/m

1. Yes, I'll catch the next one. No hurry.
2. It does not matter much. Let us see when the next train leaves.
3. Don't worry. There is no hurry. I'll leave by the next.
4. What is the use of crying over it? Let's see about reaching there in time.
5. It is alright. I can catch the next. There is no urgent business.
6. Does not matter much. I'll go tomorrow.

63. /M/i

1. It is not your fault. I'll try for the next.
2. Sometimes this happens. I'll write to my office.

64. /M/m

1. It is alright. Don't worry. I can go by the next.
2. Don't worry. You tried your best. Now let us wait for the next.

67. U

3. Don't be sorry. I'll catch the next.
4. Don't worry. The next train leaves in ten minutes.
5. It is not your fault. Let us hope I can get a seat in the morning flight.
6. Never mind. It so many times happens. I'll catch the next train.
7. Oh! Don't say like that. I should catch another one.
8. That is alright. Let us see what we can do now.
9. Don't be worried about the past. Let's think of some other way to reach the place.

SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS

SITUATION No. 5

A customer is complaining to the shopkeeper that she has brought back a new watch now because it stops.

1. E'/
2. /E/

1. There is something wrong with the pendulum.
2. Better you should have purchased standard make. May be you don't wind it. You should find out the reason.
3. There must be some defect in your door which does not appeal to the watch.
4. You must be using it roughly.
5. Do you wind it properly?
6. The spring may have broken due to over-winding.
7. Best way is not to take it home.
8. What a surprise!
9. I'm fed up with it.
10. Do not be a cheat again, please!
11. I hope this time will be the last.
12. You'll not come a fourth time!
13. Excuse me, you do not handle it properly. See, the axle is broken.
14. There is something wrong with your winding.
15. We've had no complaints from other customers.
16. Does it start working outside your home?
17. You must have dropped it.
18. I already asked you to leave it for a week, but you never paid heed to my words.
19. You may not be carrying it properly. Otherwise this is absurd.
20. It may not be a good watch or you may not be handling it properly.
21. This watch needs a balanced wrist.
22. If it stops as soon as you get home, nothing to worry.
23. Try to remain away from home.
24. There must be something wrong with home and not the watch!

25. It cannot be. Probably you do not know how to handle watches.
26. Keep the watch outside when you get in.
27. You do not know how to use a watch.
28. Is there something awful at your home?
29. I'll give you another which will stop when you start for home.
30. The quality is inferior. So you cannot expect more out of it.
31. Do you know this is the latest model of the century?
32. I had advised you buy a standard watch. It was only a matter of a few rupees.

2. /E/

1. It is common with a cheap watch.
2. It is not our fault.
3. When you see the watch in proper working order here, where lies my fault?
4. What can we do about it? It is in working order when you bring it.
5. There may be something magnetic in your house. This watch is anti-magnetic.
6. How can I help it?

3. /E/

1. Does it? Give it to a watchmaker.
2. Buy another quality watch.
3. I should advise you to go for a superior quality watch.
4. Better change for another.
5. You can change it.

4. /I/

1. But its machinery is nice. I do not know why it has gone out of order so soon.
2. It shouldn't be so.
3. How is that?
4. It is very strange!
5. I am shocked to hear it.

5. /I/

1. I am very sorry for this.
2. It may be my mistake. Sometimes it happens that some things are not good.
3. This is our misfortune.
4. I'm sorry to hear it and hope you'll not have to come for a fourth time.

5. /I/

1. It is a mere chance.
2. What can I do? Indian made stuff is always like this.
3. It is a machine, after all. We are helpless. If they go out of order, we are not to blame.
4. It is a machine after all, like the human system.

6. /I/

1. Well, I'll repair it for no cost and give a guarantee.
2. Is it so? Let me try again.
3. You can be sure of my help. I shall repair it again.
4. Let me see what is wrong.
5. Leave it with me. I'll check it.
6. Don't worry. You can take this if you want.
7. Don't worry. Leave it with me.
8. You can have another.
9. I assure you it will not trouble you again.

10. Leave it with me for a week.
11. If it is not good, why don't you take another watch on trial.
12. Don't worry. We've given guarantee and will be responsible for any defect.
13. I'll write to the company and get you another.
14. Come back. I'll do my best to fix it up.
15. This time I shall open it fully.
16. I shall repair it free.
17. I'll work well in future.
18. I'll set it right again. Now you won't have any complaint.
19. Let me see it once again. There may be something fundamentally wrong with the watch.
20. Don't worry. You can have another if you want.
21. If you're not satisfied, take another one in the place of this.
22. Here is another watch of the same type.

8. /M/

1. What is the trouble? And when did you purchase it?

9. /I/

1. O! never worry. It'll work well after sometime.

COMBINATIONS

20. /E: E/

1. I am not to be blamed. You must have dropped it.
2. The company is quite good. It must have fallen somewhere.
3. You bought a cheap watch. What can I do?
4. Are you sure you have not dropped it? We've the best watches here.
5. There must be something wrong with handling it. It is a good make.
6. Did you buy it from my shop?
7. Our watches are of good quality. You must have dropped it.
8. The watch is of good quality. There must be some good reason—Perhaps your carelessness.
9. Every time you check it yourself and take home. I can't help it.

20. /E: E/

21. /E/

1. What can I do? You have to pay for it.

23. /E: I/

1. I'm sorry. But do you wind it regularly?
2. I'm very sorry. I cannot exchange it now.

27. /E/

1. Will you please leave it with me for a day? I'll see why it does not work. By the way, how did you wind it?
2. I do not know what happens when you take it home.
3. This time you'll not have any complaint.
4. But the watch is alright. I don't know why it stops at home only. Anyway, leave it here and I shall see to it.
5. Your children touch it. Well, let me see what wrong with it.
6. How funny! Let me see!

6. Funny, isn't it? I shall set it right.
7. Are you sure you have not dropped it? I'll try to do what I can.
8. You must have dropped it on the way. Please take a seat and I'll see to it.
9. Better try this one. This watch does not seem to like you.
10. I cannot help it, if your watch stops at home. I shall try to repair it again.
11. Well, what can I do? I can repair it properly? Is it so? I am sorry. Do you wind it the same make.
12. Leave it and I'll give you another of the same make.

28. /E/

1. It is not my fault. I'm sorry you were unlucky to get a bad piece. I'll write to the company and request for a replacement.
2. I'll mend it again, but I'm sure the watch-keeper sold you an old watch.
3. I've tried my best. Now I shall send it to the company.

36. I/E/

1. I don't know what happens. I gave you the latest model.

40. I/I/

1. I don't know how it happens. You leave it. I'll get it repaired.
2. I cannot understand it. It remains mystery. This time also leave it. I'll recheck.
3. This is rather strange. Anyway, I shall give it to our best workmen for a thorough check up.
4. I'm myself surprised how it happens. Anyway, I'm ready to help you. Let it remain with me for a few days.
5. I wonder what is wrong. Let it remain with me for a few days.
6. Does it? It should not do so. I'll see.
7. It has never happened previously. Let me see what is wrong.

47. /I/

1. Sorry. How can I help?
2. I'm sorry for it. I'll have a thorough look to find out the defect.
3. Oh! Let me see. I'm really sorry for the inconvenience.
4. I'm very sorry for this. If anything goes wrong, it is my duty to correct it. I'll examine it minutely and not give you another chance to come.
5. I'm sorry to cause you all this botheration. I shall repair it well this time.
6. I'm sorry. This time I shall give you a really good watch.
7. I'm really sorry. Give it to me and get an exchange.
8. I'll surely do something to stop this trouble. I feel very sorry for you.
9. It's a pity, a brand new one does this, we always do our best.
10. Sorry. We'll check it up again.
11. I shall make it alright. Please excuse me.
12. Excuse me. I'll set it right.
13. Is it? I'm sorry. I'll fix it again.
14. You are free to change it a number of times if it does

48. /I/

1. Such are the poor productions of today. Foreign imitations? I'll try again.
2. Spare parts are hard to get. We'll replace it soon. This time you'll have no complaint.
3. Give it to us. We'll have it repaired. We bring our things from standard firm, but still, we can't avoid mishaps.
4. We did our best. Give again and you won't have need to complain.
5. It is after all a machinery, which can go wrong. This time I shall repair with a new part.
6. It is after all a machine. All that we can do is to send it to the company for a check up.
7. There might be some mechanical defect, you get it changed. I'll inform the company.

67. U

1. It also resists. (It is not clear whether this is an expression of aggression and so should be scored E)

SITUATION NO. 6

A library attendant is explaining to a girl carrying four books that the rules permit only two books to be taken at a time.

1. E//

1. But if I need more than 2 at a time.
2. But I need other too.
3. But which two?
4. I see!
5. Is it so?
6. But, have an important assignment to do and I've no time to read them here.
7. But I want to take 4.
8. I know, but I need all 4 at a time.
9. But today I want more, to prepare for my essay.
10. I know. But the exams are near and these are indispensable.
11. But they are not sufficient. At least 4 should be issued at a time.
12. Only 2 books for such a big class!
13. Excuse me. These are extremely necessary.
14. That is too bad. I want to take more books.
15. But what can I do? I want 4 reference books.
16. Only one?

2. /E/

1. Oh! no! We can have 5 at a time.
2. Who are you to interfere? I pay for it.
3. Then why are you giving me 4?
4. How impractical!
5. Give me a 2 at one time and 2 after a few seconds.

2. /E/

1. 2 are mine and the other 2 my friends!
2. Third is mine, please!
3. I know. But I've to return one book.
4. I am borrowing on my friend's ticket.
5. I am taking 2 for my friend on her card.

3. //e

6. I've to prepare for my test and so have borrowed cards from my friends.

1. Issue one to-day only.
2. Let me have one to-day.
3. Please give me more than 2.
4. Please permit me this time.
5. Can't you manage to give me this time?
6. Don't you have duplicate copies of these?
7. Is it not possible to relax the rule for me?
8. I know. But I want to ask if there can be any exception.

9. Please issue the other 2 in your name.
10. May I take 4 books at a time?
11. It does not matter. You are here.
12. But it is very kind of you, if you're giving more.
13. Thanks very much.
14. I'm thankful for your favour.
15. Kindly issue these in my name.
16. I get them now? Thank you!
17. You are my elder sister. This relation permits me to have anything which is under you.

5. //f

1. I am so sorry.
2. I'm sorry I overlooked it.
3. I forgot. Excuse me.

5. //f

1. Sorry. I did not know it.
2. I did not know. Please excuse me.
3. I'm sorry. Please excuse me. It was not known to me.
4. Thank you. I thought I could take 5 at a time.
5. Really? I was not aware of this.
6. Sorry, I thought I could take as many as I require.

6. //f

1. I shall return the third before I go home.
2. Alright. I'll read in the library just now.
3. Then I shall read these books here and take only 2.
4. O.K. I shall try to have some other's card.
5. Really? Then I'll return this one.
6. I shall read and return these early, to get the new ones.
7. It is alright. I'm keeping the other books.
8. Well, I'll leave the extra book.
9. Alright. I'll put back the others. Should I?
10. I'll come 2 times to the library.
11. I'll come later for these books.
12. I shall take the third tomorrow.

7. M//f

1. That is good. In this way, larger no. of persons get chance to use the books. Even otherwise, we can't read more than 2.
2. That is more than enough. After all, one can read only one book at a time.

8. /M/

1. Alright.
2. O.K.
3. Thank you for your kind information.

9. //m

1. Issue only 2 then.
2. Alright. Then give me only 2.

3. Please give me 2 now and 2 later.
4. Is it so? Then kindly give me the first 2 books.
5. Give me 2. I'll take the rest, when I return these.
6. Really? Then I will get the other books later.
7. Issue 2 and retain the third.
8. We should make the best of them.
9. In that case, I'll take only 2.
10. Then I'll obey the rules.
11. I must respect your rules. Let me select the 2.
12. Let us follow them.
13. I can manage to procure 4, by taking 2 at a time. Thank you. Then I'll have two.

COMBINATIONS

10. E/E/

1. You didn't remind me of it before. No help, I'm afraid, though I need them all.

12. E//e

1. You are right. But I need these badly. I shall be very obliged if you kindly allow me to take.
2. But can't I take more books? I really want to do a lot of work.
3. Please do a special favour, as I'm in bad need of all.
4. Can't you forego the library rules this time? I require all the books for research.
5. Kindly give me 3 books this time. I need them urgently.
6. But I've to do my assignment. Kindly allow me to take for 2 days only.
7. Please. I want all of them. Couldn't you help in some way?
8. Can you give me 2 sometime after I take these 2?
9. I need all the 4 urgently.
10. I know the rules, but I've an important assignment. Please issue these on your spare ticket for one day.
11. O! Goodness! I've to finish a tutorial. If none else needs them, could I have them?
12. But I want to take more than 2. What should I do?

14. E//f

1. I am sorry to take more books, but I need them badly.
2. Then give me 2. I require them very much. The third one I shall reserve and get issued next time.
3. But I want some more. Can I borrow cards from some one else and get them issued?

16. E//f

19. E//m

1. Alright. I wish I could take more. Anyway, give these 2.
2. If you can't make this allowance, which I require badly, I shall take 2.
3. O.K. I'll take 2, though I need all of them.
4. I require all the 4. Well, I shall take 2, as the rule permits.
5. Then I'll have to take only two.
6. But I need all of them badly. If it could be issued somehow. If not, alright I'll take two of them.

21. /E/e

1. I'm asking for 2 books. Give me.

22. /E/c

1. I'm taking 2 books on my friend's card. I've to write an essay and have to refer to all these 4 books. Please issue all of them.

26. /E/i

1. I am taking only 2 books. The other 2 are for reading in the library. I shall put them back in their proper place.

33. /E:i

1. Please make a concession today. I'll not make the same request again.
2. Please issue one provisionally. I shall return one tomorrow morning.
3. Will you please make a concession this time? I've to consult all these at once. I shall return one as soon as possible.

34. /E: m

1. Then issue these 2 and get the other 2 reserved in my name.
2. Can't you allow me more this time? If it is really impossible, issue only 2.
3. Please I require more, if you can. Otherwise as you please.
4. That I know. But I need them very much. If it can be done somehow, please do. Or else I'll leave it.

47. /I/i

1. I'm sorry. I shall keep back the other book and take only 2.
2. Sorry. I brought 4. I'll see 2 here and take 2 with me.
3. Sorry. I shall leave the one extra.
4. So sorry. I should have read the rules. Now I'll put back the other 2.

48. /I/i

1. I did not know it. Sorry. I shall return the 3rd to the shelf. Could I reserve it?
2. I thought I could get 2 on one ticket each. If it is so, I'll keep back 2.
3. Sorry. I did not know the rules. I won't do like this next time.
4. O! I did not know. I shall put back the third.
5. I did not know the rule. Please take one back. I'll take it tomorrow.
6. Oh! I didn't know it. Will you please reserve the third one for me? I'll take it after finishing these two.

51. /I/m

1. I'm sorry. Give me 2 and keep the third.
2. Sorry. I forgot. Anyway, I'll take 2 only.
3. Sorry. I shall select these 2 and remaining read some other time.
4. Sorry, my mistake. Anyhow give me these two.

52. /I/m

1. I did not know it. I'll take 2 only.
2. I didn't know it. I don't want to break the rules. O.K. I'll take 2 at a time.
3. O.K. I did not know it earlier. Please let me have only 2 books.
4. Well, give me only 2. I did not know the rules.

67. U

1. What is the time limit for retaining a book?

SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS

is used for statements indicating that the speaker will actually do something to solve the problem, with emphasis on the action: "I'll come later for these books".

is employed when the speaker is willing to abide by the rules, without any complaint "Then I'll obey the rules"; or when the speaker suggests action conforming to the rules: "Issue two and retain the third".

is used for responses in which the conformity is expressed ungraciously: "Then I'll have to take only two", or when conformity is accompanied with annoyance: "O.K. I'll take two, though I need all of them".

SITUATION NO. 7

A tailor is accusing a customer of being too fussy.

1. E//

1. About what?
2. What is the fuss in it?
3. Why? What have I done?

2. E/

1. Don't you see I'm in a great hurry?
2. Yes, I'm.
3. It is your fault. You did not make the coat as I ordered.
4. If I am, then?
5. Why do you ask such a question to me? What made you ask that?

2. E/

1. No, Sir!
2. Exactly not, Sir!
3. Certainly not!
4. It is not the case here.
5. No, I'm not.
6. It is nothing to be fussy.
7. No, You are mistaken.
8. Not at all.
9. I don't think so.
10. You're having a wrong idea about me.
11. Oh! no!
12. No please!
13. No, rather exact!
14. No, Sir! But I'm careful about my clothes.
15. No. It is nothing of the sort. It is all natural.
16. No, I'm not. Your estimation is quite wrong.
17. I'm not fussy. There is something wrong with this coat.
18. I believe in being properly dressed.
19. Well, why shouldn't I?
20. No question of fuss. I like to have clothes stitched according to taste.
21. No. Why should I be?
22. O! no! The tailor has not stitched them properly.
23. No. It is a matter of my own choice.
24. I don't think so.

25. Why should I be fussy? It does not fit me.
 26. O! no! I'm not fussy at all. I cannot wear clothes that do not fit me.
 27. I hope not!
 28. No. I want a proper fit.
 29. The left side—it hangs a bit.
 30. I don't look smart in this suit.
 31. I dislike loose fitting. My arms are hanging.
 32. I like to wear smart fitting clothes.

3. //e

1. Please have a little more patience.
 2. Just 2 minutes more!
 3. Please try to understand me.
 4. Please mend it again.

4. I//

1. Am I really?
 2. Is it so?
 3. I do not know the reason.

5. //I

1. I'm sorry please!
 2. Excuse me.
 3. I feel so.
 4. I also think so.
 5. Yes. I'm afraid so.

5. //I

1. Not really! I do like my clothes to be well-tailored.
 2. Not in the least! I'm keeping abreast of the current fashion.
 3. Our job requires it.
 4. That is alright—it is the modern fashion!
 5. You are right, but in this profession we have to be.
 6. I'm not being fussy. I want to do the best job I'm capable of doing.
 7. I like to have well-stitched clothes.
 8. I'm not. I am late. I have to be busy a bit.
 9. I like to be neat and tidy.
 10. No. I want a proper fit.
 11. Clothes are worn to please others. So, it is good to be a little fussy.
 12. It is good to be. I am going for an interview.
1. I won't repeat it.
 2. I shall pay extra for your service.
1. No. It is alright, with a little adjustment.
 1. Now I look like a king.
 2. I find it alright. Let me see again at the back.
 3. (I suppose you do get a lot of complaints these days)

COMBINATIONS

10. E//E/

1. You have made the coat too small and you say I am fussy.

20. /E: E/

1. No, not at all. As I asked you, have you made it properly?
 2. I don't think so. What made you think that?

21. /E/e

1. Don't be silly. Please pin it tighter here.

22. /E/e

1. No question of being fussy. I expect a correct fitting for the money I pay. Please fit it right.
 2. It is not being fussy. It is clear that the suit does not fit as well as it should. Please put it right.

46. //I: I/

1. I beg to be excused. I am going for an interview; the coat should be well-tailored.

47. /N/

1. Sorry to be fussy and give you so much trouble. I am afraid, I am. I shall try not to be too fussy.

/E/

is employed when (1) the speaker completely denies being fussy: "No, I'm not fussy", (2) the speaker does not think himself too critical in view of something wrong with the coat or the tailor, and thus thinks his criticism is justified: "I'm not fussy. There is something wrong with this coat".

/I/

is used for responses showing that the speaker is critical (1) because of something wrong with himself which provides some excuse: "I am not. I am late; I have to be fussy a bit", (2) because of his taste, without criticising the coat or the tailor: "Not really. I do like my clothes to be well tailored".

SITUATION NO. 8

A young man is explaining to a companion that the latter's wife was his classmate for many years.

1. E//

1. Did you enjoy her company?
 2. How enjoyable those days were?
 3. How did you like her?
 4. What type of woman is she in your opinion?
 5. How did you think of her?
 6. You must have talked of her would be husband. Was she so sober and calm?
 7. Enjoyed those days?
 8. Do you remember some of her qualities?
 9. When were you together in school or college?
 10. Which class were you study together?
 11. Tell me something more about her childhood.
 12. May I know something more of those days?
 13. Is it? I didn't know. Tell me something of those glorious days.
 14. Is it so? In which class?
 15. When?
 16. Of working and playing together?
 17. You vividly remember those days?
 18. Oh! You know my wife!
 19. Oh! It is news to me! How strange! Wish I'd met you before.
 20. Of course, we remember more of those who have been closer to you. Was my wife so to you?
 21. So you knew her fully well!
 22. Were you? I didn't know this.

2. /E/

23. I am sorry to hear that.
24. (Thinks to himself). Then I shall forget those days.
25. Were you? How was she then?
26. That is why she always talks about you and her school days.
27. I wish I'd been there too.
1. Happy to meet another brother-in-law. How was she in those days?
2. Still unmarried?
3. O! I'm so jealous of you.
4. Which were those pleasant experiences? Will you please explain?
5. What does it make me?
6. Be clear about the vividly of those days.
7. Will you please tell me the enchanting memory of those days?
8. Did something extraordinary happen that you remember them even now?
9. If you went back to those days, would you be husband and wife again?
10. Well, so much better for you!
11. You have a good memory!
12. You should!
13. What a good memory you have!
14. Won't you like to see her now?
15. She is a nice lady now.
16. That is really a good introduction!
17. How do you feel now?
18. Oh! I can recollect you now.
19. You have! Very well!
20. Thank you for this recapitulation.
21. So, that is why you are so considerate to my wife!
22. So what?
23. Is it?
24. Oh! I see!
25. May be. But I don't know you.
26. Then was there something special between you?
27. What do you mean?
28. What then?
29. Don't tell me that. My wife never studied.
30. But she does not!
31. Much to my dislike!
32. Were you?
33. Sorry. They will be of no use to you now.
34. You never told me before.
35. I was the neighbour of your wife. We too were intimate.
36. Why have you come now to tell me? Ask your wife to become my friend now. That will be enough.
37. I never heard her mentioning you.
38. O! Is it so? Thank you very much.
39. I'm sorry to say my wife's memory is very poor.
40. You fool! Be out of my sight.
41. Shut up! Let bygones be bygones.
42. (Doesn't answer. Face red with rage).
43. You mean to say my wife was your friend. What nonsense!
44. Yes. She has told me everything, including the incident when she slapped you.

3. //e
4. I'll5. //I
7. M'll

8. /N/

44. Now what do you want from me?
45. But I remember the days when you and I were classmates.
46. Do you know me? I don't recognize you. What is your name?
47. But she has never told me this.
48. Were you classmates or something else?
49. Don't worry. You can be mates now.
1. Now you should forget about it.
2. That is very interesting.
3. It is natural.
4. Those must be good old days.
5. It must be good to remember one's past days sometimes.
6. Those charming memories definitely give sensation and pleasure to everybody.
7. My wife! What a coincidence? She is your classmate! It is but natural for you to remember those days.
8. How interesting! Keep on remembering them, old boy!
9. Glad to know it!
10. Yes. I know. Very happy ones too!
11. You should have had a nice time.
12. Yes. I know all that.
1. She has told me all about her classmates.
2. (I am sorry I misunderstood you).
3. Remembrances of past are always joyful.
4. That is true of everyone. Student life is really the most enjoyable period of one's life.
5. Yes. Childhood memories are always deep printed in one's mind.
6. Yes. My wife is a sweet-tempered lady who pines all by her amiable demeanour.
7. I know, a person always thinks of the past.
8. That is very nice. Memories are very sweet.
9. Well. It is always a pleasure to recollect the days with friends. Is it not so?
10. Really! You were lucky to have such a companion.
11. Really! How nice! I've met many of her classmates and found them to be good companions.
12. Yes. Pleasant memories always this!
1. Happy to meet you!
2. Do visit us sometime.
3. Is it so? Then you must come home some day. She will be so glad to meet you!
4. Would you mind a cup of tea with us?
5. Oh! You were classmates! Then you are my brother.
6. Come and enjoy our company.
7. You must come to our house once. I'll tell her.
8. Is it so? Then come and sit.
9. It is very nice! Come and have lunch with us.
10. It is a matter of pleasure. You are most welcome!
11. That's good. Were you good friends?
12. My wife will be happy to see and please do come. It is very good you were a classmate of my wife.

13. It is so good to see my old companion.
14. Then our friendship has stronger bonds, as she was your classmate too!
15. So, may I claim your friendship too!
16. Let us be friends also!
17. Well you must have many sweet things to tell. Come one day to our house and we shall talk of old memories!
18. That is very nice. We should also be good friends.
19. Yes she often talks about you. I am very glad to meet you.
20. It'll give her great pleasure if you come home today.
21. I'd a great desire to see you! I'm really pleased.
22. I'm so glad to meet you. I'm sure my wife would be happy to hear that I met you.

 18. E/M/
 27. /E/i
 29. /E; M/
1. I was not fortunate like you to study in a mixed school.
 2. It is a pity that we were not classmates.
 3. Both of you must have had a good time together.
 4. She is in Heaven now.
 1. Yes. School days are very sweet to remember. In which class did you study together?
 1. So my wife was your classmate? Do come to meet her whenever you want.
 1. Then what? Tell me what I can do for you.
 2. I see! What should you like me to do for you?
 1. Is that so? I'm glad to meet you. She has never told me about you, though!
 2. What? But she has never talked about you. Do you want to see her? Come along.
 3. Now you may come to my home and again talk with her

SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS

/I//
is used when the new knowledge is construed as not frustrating, but the response is less enthusiastic: "This is very interesting", "It is natural".

M//
is used when the situation is taken as normal and natural, indicating no embarrassment: "Yes, my wife is a sweet tempered lady who pleases all by her amiable demeanour".

/M/
is employed for statements showing that the speaker evinces pleasure in meeting the man or invites him to visit: "Happy to meet you", "It is very nice. Come and have lunch with us".

SITUATION No. 9

The attendant at a laundry is refusing a customer his coat until the manager comes in the afternoon.

1. E//
1. I think no other alternative is left.
2. Well, there is no choice.
3. But I was told I'll get it now.
4. This is very troublesome.
5. But I can't wait. I've to go for some urgent work.
6. But I've to attend a marriage party.
7. I'm already late.
8. How can I wait for such a long time?
9. Where has he gone? When will he come?
10. Don't you understand I've to wear it in an hour's time?
11. But why?
12. How can I? I've to catch the 2 O'clock train.
13. And if the manager does not come in the afternoon?
14. How disgusting!
15. No. I can't wait. How can I? I've come from far.
16. I can't wait long.
17. But I need it now. Otherwise you could give it to-morrow or the day after.
18. How long will that take?
19. What will I wear till afternoon?
20. Should I keep waiting? It is really bad.
21. It were better if the manager was here just now.
22. Don't you have the authority to give me the coat?
23. But I was given this time and I'm going out of station in half an hour.
24. At what time does he come back? I'm already late.
25. Oh! How awful! The time was for today. Are you sure he will be here this afternoon? Otherwise you'll be letting me down.
26. I need it immediately. I've to attend an interview this afternoon.
27. But I was told I shall get it by 10.30 A.M.
28. How long will that take?
1. What for are you here please?
2. Will your manager wait for the money?
3. Why didn't you tell me before?
4. How irresponsible are you people?
5. How ridiculous! May I know why?
6. You people always trouble others.
7. You shouldn't behave with your customers like this.
8. But you told me you would give it today.
9. Didn't I tell you I need it this time? In future, please see that you don't make false promises.
10. What do you mean? You never give thought at the right time.
11. But you should have told me earlier. After all, I don't have so much time to waste. Could I see the complaint book?
12. But what has the manager to do with my coat?
13. It is awful you can't keep your word.
14. It is very bad of you and I'll not come to your shop in future.

3. /I/c
15. Am I responsible for the absence of the manager?
 16. He must have a responsible assistant.
 17. How many times do you think I can afford to come?
 18. You should keep these things ready.
 19. Why open the shop at all, if you cannot serve your customers?
 20. Is it written on the receipt that delivery is only when the manager is present?
 21. What manager? When the receipt is here!
 22. The manager should have authorised you to give the coat.
 23. What the hell do you mean? Are these your terms?
 24. Better take my pant also. Then you'll have a suit for your manager.
 25. Please don't mind my paying the bill next month.
 26. You are always making excuse.
 27. I'd expected this. But it is in your interests to stick to time.
 28. Please give back the cloth.
 29. Why do you need the manager to give the coat to me?
 30. If you can't give me mine, you can give me yours.
 31. I am sure you can give it to me.
 32. Have payment and give the coat. I require it now.
 33. Is there any other possibility of getting it now?
 34. I need it urgently, please give it now.
 35. I can't afford to come so many times. It is ready. Please give me.
 36. I need it now. I've the cloth. You find my coat.
 37. You must help me. I need it now.
 38. Can't you see I'm in a great hurry? Please let me have it.
 39. No. I want it just now!
 40. You write the address and give me the coat.
 41. Here. I'll sign I've taken it.
 42. Can't I give in writing that I've taken my coat and take it?
 43. I require it today.
 44. Well, I'm leaving a chit for him. Here find a cheque for your bill and deliver me the coat.
 45. I don't think there should be any difficulty after the verification of the receipt.
 46. But I've to leave. Make it possible to deliver just now.
 47. I need it now. Here is the receipt. You can't refuse to give it.
 48. As I need it now, please give it if it does not inconvenience you.
 49. O! dear me! Isn't there someone else who could give to me now?
 50. Please be merciful. Don't make me wait till evening.
 51. Why can't you give it? I'll pay for it.
 52. Will you call the manager? I'm in urgent need.
 53. Can't you help me in anyway?
 54. Can't I get him earlier?
 55. Cannot you give it to me? I'm in great need of it.
 56. But I want it just now. I have to attend a meeting. Please manage somehow or other.
 57. That is right. But I wanted it before, If you can do something.

6. //i
1. In that case, I shall come again in the afternoon.
 2. It is better I come tomorrow.
 3. O.K. Then I shall come in the afternoon.
 4. Then I shall manage without it somehow and have it tomorrow.
8. /M/
1. If you are not authorised I shall not worry you. Thank you!
 2. Alright.
 3. Well, after all, you can't give it without your manager's permission.
 4. I don't mind.
9. //m
1. Sure, I'm waiting.
 2. Well, I should wait.
 3. Alright. I'll wait.
 4. That is alright. I shall wait for him.
10. E//E/
- COMBINATIONS
1. You promised to give me now. I'm badly in need of it.
 2. Why don't you understand my difficulty? I'm in urgent need.
 3. I don't see what the coat has to do with the manager. I need it now. How can I wait till he comes?
 4. But I asked you to do it in the morning and I'm in a great hurry.
 5. You've given a timed date on which I've come. I need it urgently. Please fix the time.
 6. But you told me it would be ready. Otherwise I'd not have come.
 7. I do not know what difference it will make. See that I do not have to come again.
 8. There is so much inefficiency. I've come from so far. I'd told you several times I need it this morning.
 9. I shall be highly obliged if you arrange for the delivery just now. Or else, I'll have to waste my time (come again).
 10. But I can't wait. I want my coat just now.
 11. But I cannot wait. I've to go somewhere. Can't you manage to give it just now?
 12. If that is impossible, I'll manage with another coat and get this after he comes.
 13. This is not fair. Your manager ought to have been here, as these are working hours. I'll find it difficult to come again. Could you send it over?
 14. This is bad. Send it to my home.
 15. This is funny. I need it just now. Please contact the manager. I'll be thankful.
 16. Didn't I tell you I'll come today? I need it in the evening. Please arrange for the manager.
 17. But why should I wait for the manager? My coat is ready and you give it to me.
 18. I need my coat and not the manager.
 19. What is this? Give it just now. I'll meet the manager later.

9. Aren't you also an owner of the shop? I need my coat just now. Please give me.
10. It is not proper on your part. Anyway, see that I do not have to come again.
11. Tell me the exact time so that I do not waste my time.

1. I shall come in the afternoon, but he should have entrusted the job to someone else.
2. (I shall be back again in the afternoon. Are you sure he will?)
3. Are you sure I can get it this afternoon?
4. O.K. I'll come in the afternoon. Do not deny me that time.

1. As you can't help, I'm to wait till afternoon, if you are sure of his coming.
2. Well, if you can't help it, I will.
3. I need it, but doesn't matter if you cannot give it. I'll try to manage without it.

1. Let me know where the manager is. I'll talk to him.
2. Give me the coat now. I'll come and meet him in the afternoon.
3. I'm in urgent need, please arrange for me. Or I shall arrange for another.

1. I shall wait, but try to give it to me first.
1. But what is wrong about it? Although I've lost my slip, I remember the number well.
1. I admit I've lost the memo, but I can ask someone to stand surety or have my part till I pay surety.

1. Alright. But do keep it ready.
2. It is alright. But I want it before, if you can do something.
3. If you can give it, I shall be grateful. If not, don't mind.

SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS

E// is used when the responses stress the severity of the frustration.

/E/ is employed for responses of sarcasm, threat, impatience and criticism of the shop or the shopkeeper.

//c is used when the speaker insists that the problem be solved the way he desires.

//f is employed for responses showing that the speaker proposes a solution in which he has to take some action.

//m is employed when the speaker offers to conform to the suggestion by waiting or leaving without the coat.

SITUATION No. 10

A man is accusing another of being a liar.

1. E//
2. /E/

1. First time I come to know about it.
1. Have you any proof to support your statement?
2. How can you prove that I am and then that I know it?
3. Who told you I am a liar?
4. How do you know I'm and you are not?
5. I don't know what is the proof.
6. I may or may not, but how do you know it?
7. What do you mean by that?
8. Prove it.
9. Are you sure of your conviction?
10. You'll have to give proof or apologise.
11. I'm sure it is prejudiced.
12. Do I? Are you sure?
13. Alright. Be it so. Prove it.
14. I object. Please prove it.
15. O! Come on! Don't behave like a fool.
16. Why need you tell what I know?
17. If you know, why argue about it?
18. Thanks for telling me what you think I am.
19. You cannot say it, unless I know it.
20. You are making wild statements.
21. You may say that you like.
22. Think before you speak.
23. Of course! It is not your fault. Every man is a saint in his own eyes. But I know what I am, no matter what you so foolishly think.
24. Alright. I'm a liar. Do what you like with me.
25. That is an idea!
26. I'm sorry. It seems only your privilege to know the fact.
27. O.K. If you don't believe me!
28. So what?
29. If it is so, I've nothing to say!
30. You think I?
31. Can you remedy it?
32. Don't be silly!
33. A liar thinks all others to be liars.
34. How dare you say it to my face and what proof have you?
35. Shut up or I'll kill you.
36. You've no right to accuse me like this.
37. I did not ask for your opinion.
38. I may be, but you are no better.
39. You know what every man knows, don't you?
40. Then I'm the sufferer and no one else.
41. If you think so, avoid me.
42. I expect a little more decency from you.
43. Are you Satyawadi Harishchandra?
44. Yes. Liar to a liar.
45. It is not your concern. First look to yourself.
46. It is too bad to pass such remarks on other persons. You should think before you speak.
47. Who said I'm a liar? I myself never knew it.

48. I refuse to talk or argue with you, as you seem to know me better than I do.
 49. I expect a little more decency from you than to call me liar in front of other people.
 50. If you think I'm a liar, know it and still do so, avoid me. What else?
 51. Have you made this decision on careful thinking? I'm sure this is not an unprejudiced decision.
 52. So what? Everyone is, when it suits his convenience.

2. /E/

1. No, I'm not a liar.
 2. I'm afraid you are not doing justice to me. I told you I've not lied.
 3. No.
 4. But I say you, it is not with me.
 5. I did not tell a lie. How can all this be possible?
 6. No, I don't know.
 7. No, I always speak the truth.
 8. Friend, I really do not know about it.
 9. Certainly not.
 10. No, you are wrong.
 11. Well, I'm not. You are accusing me wrongly.
 12. Excuse me. I'm a lecturer and don't do such thing.
 13. No, I'm not conscious of a mistake.
 14. Sincerely I tell you, I did not know. Otherwise I'd have told you.
 15. I can prove my innocence.
 16. I do not suppose myself to be a liar.
 17. I tell you honestly I've not taken your pen.
 18. I don't know where your watch is.

← 3. /E/

1. Listen. Why should I tell a lie? Try to understand.
 2. Listen. You'll realise my point.
 3. Be patient and you'll know the facts.
 4. Listen to me at least.
 5. Please allow me to explain.
 6. Be gentle and behave politely.

4. /I/

1. How can you say this?
 2. Me! Why do you say so?
 3. But how can you accuse me like this?
 4. What makes you think so?
 5. I'm sorry you have a wrong idea.
 6. Only if I could assure you! It is true!
 7. I'm sorry you've such a poor opinion about me.
 8. I hope you may change it.
 9. I'm very sorry I can't make you believe.
 10. How can you be so insensitive as to think such a thing?
 11. I don't understand what you mean.
 12. Please stop. Don't put the blame upon me.

5. /I/

1. Regret.
 2. Yes. You can punish me.
 3. I admit it.
 4. I'm sorry. Pardon me.
 5. Yes. I accept my fault. Please excuse me.
 6. Yes, I know it.

16. E//i

20. /E; E/

1. I fully admit. But I cannot help it.
 2. Really I am not, but circumstances have made me so.
 3. I was compelled to tell a lie.
 4. I shall try to improve myself.
 5. I shall try to prove my statement.
 6. You are right. Everyone is a liar.
 7. Lie is a relative term. Your truth may be a lie to me.
 8. Everyone tells lies sometime or other.
 9. But you surely don't mean it.
 10. You have misunderstood me. I know myself quite well.
 11. Sorry, don't misunderstand me.
 12. You could not understand me.
 13. (Let's forget it).
 14. Let's know each other's faults and try to remove them.
 15. Isn't it better to settle our quarrel through peaceful means?

COMBINATIONS

1. I wish I could make you believe.
 2. Well, I'm not. Will you kindly let me know on what grounds you've ascertained it?
 3. Well, I've never told a lie. May be you are telling one and think the same about others.
 4. I'm not. You are a liar yourself and know it.
 5. I'm not lying. Stop accusing me.
 6. No, I'm not. You've no right to accuse anyone.
 7. I know I'm not telling a lie and it does not bother me what you think.
 8. I've told the truth. It's up to you to believe or not.
 9. No, I am not. Are you sure you have never lied in your life?

21. /E; e

1. Please do not say this.

23. /E; I/

1. Yes. I admit it. What next?
 2. Alright. I'm a liar. How is it you are making a publicity of it? Have you never been a liar?

27. /E/

1. Remember, you are overstepping your limits by accusing me, though what I've said is true and can prove it.
 2. Please prove it. If it is so, I shall try not to be so in future.

29. /E; M/

1. Do not say things you may have to take back. You do not know the whole story.
 2. Take back your words. You've misunderstood.

30. /E: M/
- No, I did not tell a lie. He has given you wrong information.
 - It is a sure case of misunderstanding, for I'm not.
 - You have misunderstood me. It is a fact, I told you.
 - You are mistaken. I never knew it.
31. /E/m
- When you come to know the facts, you'll have to withdraw your words.
35. /E/
- It is a painful remark. Don't blame me unless you are sure.
 - Even if I am, don't accuse me in front of your servant.
 - Please do not say this. How have you come to know?
 - How can you say so? What is the proof?
36. /E/
- No, I'm speaking truth. Why don't you believe me?
 - Why do you say that? I never speak a lie.
 - Am I? Don't be so cruel to me. I know and every one knows I'm not a liar.
 - Please do not misunderstand me. I do not know any thing about it.
37. /E/
- Please help me in leaving this habit of mine.
 - Alright, I'm a liar. Give me a chance to speak.
47. /E/
- I admit it, but assure you it will not happen again.
49. /E: M/
- I don't know why you've misunderstood me. If I've hurt you, please excuse me.
50. /E: M/
- I really never knew it. I'm not telling a lie. You've just misunderstood the thing.
52. /E/m
- You will change your idea about me when I tell you why I told that lie.
54. M/E/
- Till now I have never been accused of this. If you think so I can't help it. But I'm not aware of it.
62. /M/e
- I'm not. You have misunderstood me. Please listen to my statement.
64. /M/m
- Why? It may be your impression based on misunderstanding. Let us discuss the matter.

SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS

/E/ is used for responses involving challenges ("Have you any proof to support your statement?"), ("You are making wild statements"), threats ("Shut up or I'll kill you"), reprimands ("Think before you speak") or demands for apology or proof ("Prove it"). Such demands which are usually scored /E/ in other situations contain sufficient aggression to be scored E here.

/E/ is employed for simple denials of the accusation without further belligerence. "No. I'm not a liar."

/E/ is used when the speaker demands action on the part of the other person for solution of the problem. "Listen to me, and you will understand".

/E/ is used for statements showing that the speaker is disturbed by the situation and sorry that it arose. "How can you say so?"

/E/ is used when the speaker pleads some reason for telling a lie ("I was compelled to tell a lie").

/E/ is employed when the speaker takes responsibility to prove this innocence ("I shall try to prove my statement") or to mend his behaviour ("I shall try to improve myself").

/M/ is used when the statement implies that the speaker shows conciliatory approach by suggesting misunderstanding but not blaming ("May be you have misunderstood me") or by offering reconciliation ("Let's forget it").

/M/ is used for responses which suggest solution of the problem by mutual action: ("Isn't it better we settle our quarrel by peaceful means?")

SITUATION NO. 11

A man at 2 a.m. is apologising that he is looking for Ram's house to a person who has apparently just been awakened.

1. E//

- But this is my house.
- Nobody called Ram lives here.
- Sorry no Ram lives here. You may have to search for another house.
- This is not Ram's house.
- Sorry Ram does not stay here.
- This is not Ram's house. I can't help you.
- He has left this place.
- This is not his house. You may ask somewhere else.
- Doesn't matter. You are mistaken.
- Better to ask someone else.
- Gentleman, this is not Ram's house. He is not putting by here.

2. /E/

- I'm sorry. You should have got the correct address.
- Why didn't you knock and enquire?
- Please read the name plate.
- How could you enter the room?
- How do I know which Ram you want to see? There are so many in this locality.
- Don't you remember his address?
- Don't you have any manners to enter into other's houses when they are asleep, late at night?

8. What a way!
9. There is a patient in the room. You should have knocked gently.
10. Why do you put others in trouble, when you do not know definitely?
11. You should have knocked before you peeped.
12. That is alright. But you should not do like this in future.
13. Didn't you know we are sleeping and disturbed us?
14. You had no business to disturb me.
15. At this time of the night?
16. That is all. You have now seen and now get off.
17. A strange time to be out looking for people's houses!
18. Don't you feel shy to disturb others?
19. Run away. You have no business to linger around by house.
20. Fool! at this odd hour!
21. Go to the police station and ask.
22. What a time to disturb! I do not know any Ram's house.
23. Where are you looking?
24. What do you want at this hour of midnight?
25. Do look please!
26. Alright. You can go and look.
27. Aren't you his greengrocer? He is not in the house.
28. What is the matter? Who are you to come at this hour?

3. //e

4. I'll

5. //l

6. //i

7. M'll

1. Do please come along. I'll show you the house.
2. May I help you to locate it?
3. I'll help you to get there. It is very near.
4. I'll see if I can help you. Please tell me the address.
5. Who is that Ram? Come, I'll show you the way.
6. Tell me his address. I'll be glad to help you. Or spend the night here if it suits you.
7. Don't worry. I'll accompany and show you the house. Let me put on my clothes.
8. As I've to look after my ailing mother, I'll send my brother along to take you to his house, which is only a few yards away.
9. Let us go out and I'll tell you.
10. May I know his address to help you?

1. Yes. This is it. Please come in.
2. Come! Ram is sleeping.
3. Yes. He is not feeling well and so is in bed. Do come in.
4. Sorry, he is sleeping. Please come in.

5. O! This is it. Come in. I guess you can try waking him up.
6. Good coincidence. This is the house you are looking for.
7. Yes. But Ram is sleeping. You are on the right spot.
8. Here I am. What do you want, sir?
9. Don't you know I'm Ram?
10. Come in. He is having some rest.
11. We were just talking about you.
12. Then come in. Ram is speaking to you.
13. It can be Rama's house. You are welcome.
14. I am Ram and this is my house. My father is ill.

8. /M/

9. //m

1. Which Ram?
2. What is the address?
3. Who are you looking for?
4. It is alright.
5. Never mind.
6. Whom do you want, please?
7. Doesn't matter.
8. Oh! Don't mind.

1. Does not matter. Ram's house is next door.
2. Never mind. It is next to the right.
3. Well, it is next.
4. It is alright. It is the fifth from here.
5. He has shifted. He is at Karobagh.
6. I'll tell you. He lives in the opposite lane.
7. O! You mean Ramchacha! He lives round the corner.
8. Sorry. He lives next door to the right. I'm sure you'll find him.
9. O! Ram's house! Sorry. It's upstairs.
10. Yes. He is my brother's friend too. He stays in the next flat!
11. Go ahead.
12. Please knock next door.
13. Go that side.
14. Please go right way and there you'll find it.
15. Go ahead. Turn right—etc.
16. O! You can find it there.
17. It is alright. Go ahead and turn right...
18. Come and rest till morning. It is only 2-30. You can search in the morning.
19. Never mind. Have lunch and go.
20. He lives next door. I'm sure you will find him.
21. He lives in No. X, down the street.
22. Excuse me. Ram's house is next door.

COMBINATIONS

1. But this is the house of Ram's father-in-law. (Shows anger, enquiry necessary).

10. E'/E/

16. E'/i

1. You are in the wrong place. But would you like to sit down for a while? I'll come with you.
2. This is not Ram's house. But you may stay here for the night.

It is not his house. Come on, I'll show it to you.

18. E/M/

1. You have come to the wrong address. But it is 2 A.M. now and where will you go at this time? Are you new to this town?
2. There is no one of that name here. What is the address?

19. E//u

1. This is not Ram's house. He lives next door.
2. It is not that. Go next door.
3. You've come the wrong way. Go straight and turn right.
4. It is alright. This is not Ram's house. His house is just opposite.
5. O! You are mistaken. It is in the next block.
6. What a time to disturb. Anyway, he lives next door.

27. /E/

1. But you must have full address. I fear you cannot search this way at random. We'll tell me something more about Ram, if I could help you!
2. You should have knocked at the door before entering. Please wait in the drawing room. I'll dress and show you the way.

29. /E:M/

1. Do you know the no. of the house? No matter. Which Ram do you want, please?

31. /E/m

1. He lives next door (To himself: He should not have disturbed me at this hour).
2. Here, go this way, O! God! He has disturbed my sleep.
3. Think before you enter someone's house at this un-early hour. It is 30 yds. to the left.
4. This is no way of behaving at 2 a.m. Anyway, his house is there.
5. God! That side!
6. It is next to our house. But why have you come so late? It is 2 O'clock.

51. /I/m

1. I'm sorry. I do not know Rama's house. Better stay here and find it in the morning.

53. //i:m

1. Please wait and have breakfast with me. I'll show you Ram's house. Don't feel exhausted.
2. Come and have a glass of water. I shall guide you to his place.
3. He lives next door. If you like, I'll show his house to you.

54. M'E/

1. Please come at 10 O'clock when Ram will get up. This is his house.

59. M'//i

1. He is here. Please wait. I'll call him down.
2. He is putting up here. Kindly come in and comfort yourself till I call him.
3. Yes. This is his house. He is sleeping. What's your name? I shall wake him up.

62. /M/e

1. O.K. Be careful in future.

63. /M/i

1. Doesn't matter. Let me go with you to find his house. You could have enquired earlier. It is 2 in the night. Won't you like to sleep here and meet him in the morning?

SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS

is used when the statement shows general irritation ("This is too much"), or indicates a sharp denial ("This is not the house").

represents aggressions towards the person in the form of reprimands ("How could you enter the room?") aggression ("what a way!"), aggressive questions ("Where you are looking?") or aggressive suggestions ("Go to the police station and ask").

is employed for specific constructive suggestions which do not show aggression toward the person enquiring ("Please ask someone else").

(e) is rarely found in this situation, and E' is also much less frequent. Remarks of irritation or suggestions are likely to be absorbed by strong aggression, and so in case of doubt the probable score is E).

indicates remorse at not knowing the house being searched. This may be expressed with remorse ("I am sorry, I can't tell you as I don't know") or in a simple way ("I don't know where it is").

is employed for statements indicating a genuine desire for helping: "I'll help you to get there".

is used when the problem is minimised by suggesting the person in question stay there: ("Yes, this is Ram's house"), ("Here I am. What do you want, Sir?") is employed when the statements indicate some frustration which is evaded by such statements: ("Don't mind.") ("That's alright").

is used when the response indicates an attempt to help solve the problem. ("Well, it is the next house.")

SITUATION No. 12

A man is pointing to another that the latter's shoes have been taken by someone else who has left his own instead.

1. E'//

1. Such mistakes should never happen.
2. Yes. Yes. It is too bad.
3. But mine do not fit Sohan. These are not Sohan's either.
4. Looks like it. But how to get at my shoes?
5. What am I to do now?
6. But these are worn out. What am I to do now?
7. O! It is very bad. What will I wear now?

8. I've to go to my office. What should I wear?
9. Sohan can't do it, as my shoes won't fit him.
10. I'm already late. How can I reach at least after the assembly?
11. I cannot understand what to do. What should I wear?
12. But how am I now to get them?
13. Now what should I wear?
14. May be. Now, what am I to do?
15. I think so.
16. What a life!
17. But I cannot make the same mistake.
18. O! Heck!
19. But these are not Sohan's.
20. Is that so?
21. How do you know these are his?
22. May be possible, but cannot say anything definitely.
23. What a nuisance! What shall I do now?
24. But he'll come at 4.00 and I've to reach office by 10.00.
25. I'm in an awkward position.
26. These are not my shoes.
27. But these don't fit me.
28. What am I to do with these?
29. Where are my shoes?
30. But I won't feel comfortable in his shoes. What am I to do? I've an urgent piece of business.
31. But how can I wear this torn shoes?
32. This is very bad. I want to go to my office just now.
33. Yes. I also think so. But what am I to do now?
34. It is very bad.
35. Most troublesome.
36. But how should I find him?
37. What shall I do now? Where can I find him?
38. How to know whether there are his shoes? Do you recognise these, for I've no idea?
39. I agree with you.
40. I wish these fit me.
1. He should be more careful in future.
2. This appears to be your favourite game. Exchanging bad shoes for good.
3. What an absent minded fellow!
4. But it is your fault. I left them under your care.
5. How can he mistake mine for his? He has purposely taken my good ones and replaced these.
6. He shouldn't have made such a mistake.
7. How strange that a man walks off with another's shoes!
8. He always does this.
9. He is foolish. He'll not be able to recognise even his own wife.
10. What for are you here? You should take care properly.
11. Very bad on Sohan's part. He should have been more careful.
12. But what is your duty?
13. Don't be silly. I see mischief in it.
14. But can you imagine how one can walk putting on some one else's shoes?
15. He must have done it knowingly.

2. /E/

3. /I/

5. /I/

6. /I/

7. M'/
8. /M/

16. May be so. But why should he be so careless?
17. The managing authorities should arrange ticket system.
18. How could he do it, when his feet are smaller than mine?
19. I can't understand how people wear other's things!
20. He must have been blind.
21. It is a good mistake. You leave your old shoes and have other fellow's new ones.
22. Had he done this by mistake, he should have come and returned my shoes to me.
23. Sohan has big feet and these are small.
24. No wonder! Sohan is always in a hurry and so absent-minded!
25. Well, ask Sohan not to do so in future.
26. I wonder how people make such mistakes.
1. Will you please send him to me, if he returns?
2. Ask him to take his and return mine.
3. Please get them back when he returns.
4. Please return them when he comes back.
5. I left my shoes with you and want them back from you.
6. Then ask Sohan to bring them back.
7. Then will you please give me his shoes?
8. Then take those shoes of mine from him when he comes. We shall exchange.
1. (Oh, I'm sorry, I should not have left mine here).
2. (This is my fault, I kept them here.)
1. Let us first search here.
2. Then I shall put these on and go to see Sohan.
3. Well, I shall try to contact him and get them exchanged.
4. I'll look for him.
5. Where can I see him?
6. It is alright, please give his address. I can leave these there and get mine.
7. May I know where he lives?
8. Let us ascertain if he has.
9. Then I can ask him when I find him next.
10. Please, could you direct me to Sohan?
11. Please, let me know his address so that I may contact, find out and make the necessary exchange?
12. I'll take his and exchange when I meet him this evening.
13. I'll take his shoes to him and collect mine.
1. He is the sufferer, as my feet are bigger than his.
2. No, you are mistaken. These are my shoes.
1. That means he is in my shoes. O.K. never mind.
2. Very well.
3. It is alright.
4. It seems likely.
5. Sometimes absent minded people may do like this.
6. Probably yes. He is so forgetful.
7. He might have. He's always been absent minded.
8. It is by mistake.

9. Yes. There is every possibility.
10. Yes. They are of the same size.
11. I guess so. In such a big crowd, we are apt to lose. I've lost twice.
12. Yes. It seems true, as the 2 pairs have the same size, colour and design.
13. Yes. He could have.

9. m

1. Alright. I shall wait till he returns.
2. May be I'll put on these.
3. He must have. Anyway I shall use them now and get mine later.
4. Then let him come. I'll wait here.
5. If these fit me, I can take them till he returns mine.
6. I'll take his then.
7. Fine! Let me try his shoes then.
8. No matter. We'll exchange when we meet next.
9. Alright. Let me put these on. I shall exchange later.
10. Never mind. I'll change them later.
11. O.K. I'll go barefoot then.
12. Doesn't matter. I'll take his for the time being.

COMBINATIONS

10. E/E/

1. But I can't wear them. Some people are really careless.
2. Where to find the bloody Sohan?
3. What am I to do now? Sheer carelessness!
4. How bad of him! This pair does not fit. Or I'd have taken his.
5. So what should I do now, tell me. Can you turn them by magic?
6. He shouldn't have made such a mistake. Now I've to wear his shoes.
7. What is special about my shoes?

12. E//e

1. Please give me another pair or I have to wait for him.
2. Oh! Where is he now? Could you please go and see if he is near about?
3. But do they fit him? I've to go, so I'm taking these.
4. Ask him to come to me.
5. Now, where will I find him? Alright. I'll wear these and tell him to come and exchange them from me.

16. E//i

1. They are definitely not mine, but I'll wear them and go to Sohan—but he might not be having mine on. So I'll leave them and find mine first.
2. Well, I'll have to come again to get my shoes changed.
3. I'll have to look for him.

19. E//m

1. Let me see if these fit me or I shall be in great difficulty.
2. Those are a bit big, but does not matter. I'll wear them and go. I can perhaps meet him and tell him later.
3. It is a pity. I'll have to wait till he comes.
4. But will they fit my feet? Let me see.
5. What am I to do now? None of these will fit. Doesn't matter. I'll go barefoot.

6. How terrible! They look rather small. I shall go barefoot.
7. Well! Is that not a nuisance? Nothing else to do now but wear his. Since mine fitted him, his ought to fit mine.
8. But his shoes do not fit me. I'll have to go barefoot.
9. When will he come so that I can wait for him or can I put on his shoes and change later?
10. Then I'll have to do with these, as there is no way out.
11. Now, what can I do? We shall change in the evening.
12. As I'm in a hurry I'll use these now and later exchange.
13. But what should I do now? Let me try if these will fit me.
14. But his shoes do not fit me. Anyhow, I'll manage for the time being.
15. If my shoes can fit him, so can I do. But mine were new and his are old.
16. I'll have to go barefoot.

21. /E/e

1. That is indeed funny. Please ask him to collect his pair from my house.

31. /E/m

1. May be, but one should be careful. A little carelessness causes trouble. O! Let us await Sohan.
2. Then I shall take his by mistake and leave mine.
3. I wonder how he walked off with my shoes. Never mind I'll use his for the present.

33. //e:l

1. I'm leaving these. When he comes, you exchange and I'll collect later.
2. If he returns, please keep them with you and I shall take them later on.
3. Do you know Sohan? Then let us go and find him out and get the shoes exchanged.
4. Give me another. When he comes, I'll have mine and return these.
5. I don't want to take his shoes. Let him come and return mine.

34. //e:m

1. Well, I'll put these on. You tell him.
2. I can do without these for the time being, but inform him please.
3. Alright. I'll wait till he comes back or can you lend me a pair?
4. O.K. Then give these to him when he comes and keep mine. I shall go barefoot now.
5. That does not matter. I'll go barefoot. Better ask him to take these.
6. Alright. I'll wear these then. Ask him to return them to me.

62. /M/e

1. Yes. It might be the reason. Please send someone to remind him.
2. Yes. That may be the case. Please call Sohan.
3. Doesn't matter. Ask him to change when he comes back.

63. /M/i

1. Don't worry. I'll get them changed.
2. I know, he is always in a hurry. Where shall I find him?
3. They are similar in appearance, it may be so. They do not fit me, so I'll have to look for Sohan.

64. /M/m

1. Oh! It generally happens by mistake. I shall change them later.
 2. Oh! Because everything (colour, size) is the same.
 3. Alright. I can wear his.
- There is no light and so he has made his mistake. Let me wait.

67. U

1. What about your shoes?

SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS

/M/ is used when the speaker absolves Sohan ("It is alright"), explains his behaviour without aggression ("He might have. He is always been absent minded") or excuses him ("That means he is in my shoes. O.K. never mind").

/m is employed when the speaker indicates that he would wear Sohan's shoes ("I'll take his then") go barefoot ("O.K. I'll go barefoot then") or exchange with Sohan in future at some unspecified time ("No matter, we'll exchange when we meet next").

E//m is indicated when the speaker's conformance is expressed ungraciously: ("Then I'll have to do with these, as there is no way out").

SITUATION NO. 13

A man at his desk is stating that he cannot keep a previously arranged appointment with a caller just arriving.

1. E//

1. I never expected!
1. It is no good!
3. It is too bad.
4. O! It is very disappointing.
5. It is too bad. I've come all this way from my house to see you.
6. I did not know at all!
7. I never knew!
8. Why, Sir! I've come all the way to see you. It is alright and my luck.
9. I'm quite sorry for this.
10. I wish you had let me know the change in programme.
11. I wish you had phoned or sent a message.

2. //i

1. Then you should not have given me an appointment.
2. Well, it is not proper. You should abide by what you say.
3. You should have told me that.

3. //e

1. O.K. Inform me if you require my services later.
2. What arrangement have you made then?
3. May I meet you tomorrow?
4. No matter. We can finish our business just now.
5. Well, now I'm here, I'll finalise the business.
6. Never mind, Let me know about them now.
7. I'll come tomorrow. Please make the arrangements today.
8. Never mind. You see me in the evening.
9. It is alright. But cannot you afford a few minutes?
10. It'll be very kind of you if you spare time to converse with me just now.
11. Then come and see me some other day.
12. I request you to see my work today itself.
13. Please see if you can spare a few minutes.
14. I won't take much of your time. If you like, we can finish in a couple of minutes.
15. Never mind. Let me know about it now.

5. //i

6. //i

7. M//

8. /M/

4. What a nonsensical office!
5. It is very shameful on your part.
6. Please think others time is also precious.
7. You shouldn't have wasted my time.
8. You should have informed me earlier.
9. Do you think I've no work?
10. Who will pay for the money and time I spent?
11. It is alright! Formality cuts no ice with me.
12. We must be more punctual, as much of my time has been wasted.
13. Thank you! But why were you missing yesterday?
14. It isn't quite fair by me.
15. You should have fixed up a time when you could have seen me.
16. A timely intimation might have avoided this embarrassment.
17. Be more careful in making appointment.
18. But you never informed me!
19. Thank you!
20. It is so kind of you!
21. But you are looking on me.
22. I'm glad of this. I wouldn't like to work in a firm which doesn't keep its appointments.
23. Well, this is really strange!
24. What stops you to meet me?
25. I see! But I hope you'll be more careful in making appointments next time.
26. You always ditch me like that!
27. Surprising!

1. Excuse me. I'm rather late.

1. Alright, I'll come tomorrow.
2. Tell me, I shall try to come some other day.

1. Thank you. I'm happy you told me in time.
2. (I was passing this way anyhow).

1. O.K.
2. Alright. As you like.
3. I don't mind coming again.

9. //m

4. Never mind. Sometimes such things happen. One cannot help it.
5. It is alright, sir!
1. When should I come again?
2. When should I come next?
3. Right. When can I see you next time?
4. Thanks. May I have another appointment?
5. Well, tell me the time you are free to see me next.
6. When will it be convenient now?
7. Then when could I see you?
8. Well, I'm going. But, when will we again meet?
9. No matter. I like to fix another time.
10. O.K. Will you please arrange to meet me sometime else?
11. O! then, when can I meet you?
12. Alright. Give me some other date.
13. Alright. Shall I come some other time?
14. When can I have the privilege of meeting you again?
15. Alright. For some other time when you are free?
16. Thank you. When should I come next?
17. I shall be grateful if you can tell me when you can see me next.
18. Can you meet me sometime again?

COMBINATIONS

10. E'/E/

1. I'm sorry. I'll not be able to come again.
2. You should consider the distance I come from!
3. But you promised me. Or else, I'd not have postponed my other programme.
4. It is rather discourteous of you to behave thus. I've come all the way to meet you.
5. You people in high positions always do this. You do not understand the difficulty we face.
6. But this is bad. I've come to see you only after appointment and, have wasted my time.
7. O! what type of person is he! Why can't he see me? What urgent work has he?
8. Why? What is the reason?

12. E'/e

1. I have come from a distant place—if you can?
2. Couldn't you for just 10 minutes? I've to leave station this morning. I'll be grateful if you could.
3. But, I'm in great need.
4. O! I've come hopefully with tomorrow's programme set. Alright! Hope to see you tomorrow.
5. It is strange. Is there some special engagement?
6. Or else, I won't take more than 5 mins.
7. I've come from a great distance. Please see me, even if it is only for a couple of hours!
8. But it won't take much time. I don't have free hours tomorrow.
9. Please see if you can spare sometime, as I've come from far.

18. E'/M/

1. Well I suppose it can't be helped. I'd to cancel an appointment to be able to see you today.

19. E'/m

1. I've wasted my time. When shall I see you then?
2. It has disappointed me. Can you tell when I can see you next?
3. I came from a far off place, as you asked me to. Anyway, give another time, so that I can meet you.
4. Though my time is wasted, we can fix some other time convenient to you.
5. Then when can I see you? I've some urgent work.
6. It is important. When can I see you again?

21. /E/e

1. Alright. Close your eyes and sign on this paper. My business will be over and when I leave, you can open your eyes.
2. What stops you meeting me?
3. I never know you could turn down your word. It is my appointment now and you'll have to meet me.
4. Very strange. If you had no time, why did you give time? You should see me now. Be kind enough to find time today.
5. Listen to me and don't be fussy.

27. /E/i

1. You should stick to your word. But I'll come again.
2. Well, I can come again. But be sure of the time you now fix.

31. /E/m

1. But you gave the appointment. When should I see you next?
2. Give me some other, but definite appointment.
3. You have troubled me, good for nothing. Alright, give me another time.
4. Why should I come again? Please give a time when you are definitely available.

33. //e:i

1. I'll come tomorrow. Please make the arrangements today.

34. //e:m

1. Can't you spare a few minutes? If not, let it be some other day.
2. I shall be grateful if you can spare a few minutes. I shall talk in detail at your convenience. Hope you'll not disappoint me.

53. //i:m

1. Shall I wait for sometime? Or you fix up another time.

62. /M/e

1. Never mind. You must have some important piece of work. We can talk now.
2. Why? What is the matter? Is everything well with you?
3. Is there something more important?
4. What happened?
5. Why? Is there anything wrong?
6. Is there any new problem confronting you?
7. Are you busy with some important work this morning?

63. /M/i

1. If you have some important work now, I shall come tomorrow.

64. /N/m
67. U

1. I appreciate, but when can I meet again?
1. I'm sorry, I forgot about it.
(All expressions which show that the situation has been misunderstood)

SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS

L//
is used for responses showing that the speaker is shocked ("I never expected it") or that he made special effort ("I've come all the way from my house to see you")

E//
is indicated by a direct reference to the other man's irresponsible behaviour. ("But you never informed me"), abuses ("what a nonsense office"), sarcasm ("Thank you"), aggressive advice ("Be more careful in making appointments") etc—all ways of showing aggression towards the person or the office.

//m is used when the speaker insists that he be seen now ("Let me know about it now"), or at a specified time ("May I meet you tomorrow"), or according to his own plans ("Then come and see me some other day")

//i include statements of the speaker's willingness to come again with emphasis on his own activity and without demanding cooperation from the other person: ("Alright, I'll come tomorrow")

//m is employed when a general request for another appointment is made without mentioning a definite time: ("May I have another appointment?")

/M/e
is employed when statements express a genuine desire to know why appointment was not kept with implied or expressed hope that it will be kept: ("Is there any problem confronting you? "You must have some important work. But we can talk now")

SITUATION No. 15

A man is apologising to his partner in a card game for having made a stupid play.

1. E//
1. It is a pity.
 2. Really we'd have won if you had not made that mistake.
 3. Now it is gone. There are very little chances of winning.
 4. Yes.
 5. Is it?
 6. Now we'll have to play some other trick.
 7. Now we'll have to do with this arrangement.
 8. Alright. We've lost the game.
 9. This is one of the ways in which the other party gets advantage.
2. /E/
1. Thank God ! You've seen it is your mistake.
 2. Certainly, partner !
 3. You really blundered.
 4. Oh ? dear ! You always say so.
 5. You always miss the chance.
 6. Shut up ! You now have to apologise.
 7. You should be making it again. I know.
 8. This is exactly what I'm feeling.
 9. Glad you realize it.
 10. Well this is an indirect insult I cannot put up with.
 11. You realize after doing it.
 12. You silly ! Because of your mistake, we're losing the game.
 13. Then the partner is not bad. It is your own mistake.
 14. Don't hide your own fault.
 15. No more fuss, please.
 16. Now throw your card, lest you make another mistake.
 17. I am doomed by having such a friend.

8. /M/
1. But now move on.
 2. Be more careful next time.
 3. Let us hope you do not give yourself this epithet next time.
 4. I wish you had been more careful.
 5. Keep your head on your shoulders.
 6. Well, learn through experience new skills.
 7. Don't talk while playing.
 8. Don't worry over the past. Take care of the present.
 9. Am I your partner ?
 10. I do not mind. Go on doing wrong.
 11. Once more please, and it will make us win.
4. /I/
1. You mistook. That is why I've won.
5. //i/
1. No partner, it was my mistake.
 2. O ! Sorry !
 3. We'd have made a greater winning, if I had not made that mistake.
 4. I missed the chance.
 5. You did not make the mistake. It was I.
6. //i/
1. (I'll try and cover this mistake).
7. M//
1. What difference does it make even if we lose ?
 2. Don't be so serious about mistakes in play.
 3. Don't mind. These things happen in the games.
 4. Anyway, the game is over.
 5. Never mind. It is all in the game.
 6. That is O.K. I play for the heck of it and not for winning or losing.
 7. Doesn't matter. We should not aim at winning, but at the spirit of playing the game.
 8. O ! Don't worry. In play, we should take things light.
 9. Game is game. We should not be sorry, because it is just for pleasure.
 10. Don't worry. Winning or losing does not matter much.
 11. It is only a game. What does it matter ?
 12. One party has to be defeated. Do not mind.
 13. Don't worry. Take it easy.
8. /M/
1. Doesn't matter. You played in a sportsman's spirit. It is alright. Just by chance we did not win.
 2. Don't bother. Anybody would have done the same.
 3. Oh ! It happens so.
 4. Don't blame yourself. After all it is a game where chance plays a lot. You aren't doing purposely.
 5. Even an expert makes mistake.
 6. To err is human.
 7. I may make one in the next one.
 8. Never mind.
 9. It all goes in the game.
 10. It is not the cause. We played intelligently.
 11. Nothing to worry about. Mistakes occur in a play.
 12. Don't worry. Only one of us had to win.
 13. It could have happened with me.
 14. One learns by mistakes.
 15. Never mind. You did your best.

9. //m

17. Don't bother. We all make mistakes.
18. Cheer up. It was not utterly your mistake.

1. Have more courage in yourself.
2. Well, better luck next time. Your deal now!
3. Don't lose heart.
4. Do your best!
5. Well, try again!

18. E/M/
29. /E/M/

1. Yes. We should have won. Does not matter.
2. Be careful of the future. Chance is not in our hands.
3. Never mind. Let's try again.
4. It is all a question of chance. Don't worry now.
5. Let us be careful this time (Shah's game).
6. Same old story. But remember, it is the game.
7. No one is infallible. We all make mistakes.
8. It is alright. I'm glad you have taken.
9. You've spoiled the game, but it is never certain that both partners can play alike. Don't mind.

31. /E/m

1. Do not be hasty in your remarks. Wait for the next deal.
2. Now play careful. Even now we may win.
3. Be careful. Next time we must win.
4. Don't make the mistake. This time we will win.
5. You have spoiled everything. But be careful now. We can still win.
6. Never mind. Just concentrate now and we may win.
7. No doubt, you made a mistake. But don't worry, we shall win next time.

42. F/M/

1. Yes. Mistakes do occur. That is the way life goes. But life would be so uninteresting if there were no mistakes.

47. //i

1. Excuse me. Now onwards I'll try my best to play well.

49. //i/M/

1. We both have committed a mistake each

54. M/E/

1. Yes, exactly. But never mind. It is a game and we must play in the spirit of the game.
2. That is true. Never mind. Game is game.
3. O! Don't worry. Be a good sport.
4. Forget it. It is over now.
5. Done is done.
6. Do not repent now.
7. Don't bother. Play for the sake of playing.

60. M/M/

1. O! no! When you're conscious to do a thing good, such things happen. Do not feel bad for this. It is a game after all.

61. M//m

1. It is a play. Let us play again and win.
2. Don't take it seriously. We'll make it up in the next.

64. /M/m

1. Never mind. It was not your fault. Better luck next time.
2. Don't worry. Try your luck this time.
3. Don't worry. We'll win anyhow.
4. So what? We'll try again.
5. Never mind. We'll try again.
6. Leave it. We'll play wisely next time. Don't bother. We'll make it up in the next chance. It is human to err.
7. After all, we are human beings. It is human to err. You can make it up in the next.
8. Take it easy. We may win the next round.
9. Never mind. Next time our victory is sure. Why are you worrying so much?
10. Don't worry. Let us play again.
11. Doesn't matter. Play on.
12. Now forget it and wait for the next chance.
13. Never mind. Back up. From now on, we'll have all the games in our favour.
14. Never mind. Better luck next time!
15. No matter. We'll win in next chance.
16. Oh! no. It's alright. Play carefully, we may win.
17. Does not matter. Next time try harder to win.
18. We've won the game by luck. I had no good card last time.

67. U

SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS

is used when the frustration is denied ("You misook. That is why I have won.")

M//i

is employed for emphasis on the unimportance of the game ("Game is game. We should not be sorry, because it is for pleasure") or the score ("Winning or losing does not matter much")

/M/

SITUATION NO. 16

At the scene of a cycle accident one man is accusing another of having had no right to try passing.

1. E//

1. My cycle is broken.
2. My cycle is punctured.

2. /E/

1. Why didn't you look where you are going?
2. Couldn't you see properly?
3. I also think so.
4. And you! and you too!
5. You can't talk to me so rudely.
6. And you've no right to check me. Go your own way.
7. You're also on the wrong side.
8. Who are you to make laws for me?
9. Do you want to have a fight?
10. But you should have been more careful!
11. Who is on the wrong side? You or me?
12. How do you say I'm on the wrong side? You were coming so fast; you couldn't control yourself.
13. What about you?
14. What about you? Did you sound your bell?
15. If I'm not, what about you?
16. Who are you to ask me?
17. That does not mean you should drive into my cycle.
18. You also have no right to be on the wrong side.
19. Who are you to tell me about rights and duties.
20. But you have please? So, let us be quiet.
21. I'm not to get instruction from you.
22. Mind your own business.
23. You had no right to hold the bicycle on your right side.
24. Excuse me. You've no right to ask me.
25. Will you please tell me my rights?
26. But I think you were on the wrong side.
27. It is not I, but you who are on the wrong side.
28. Don't you know we are living in a democratic country and have freedom to be on whichever side we like?
29. But you should have seen too?
30. Don't teach me the rules.
31. It is you who is on the wrong side. Try to have more road sense.
32. You should see both sides while riding.
33. It was your mistake also. You are coming so fast and there is no bell even in your cycle.
34. Two wrongs do not make a right. They only lead to an accident.
35. Are you a policeman?
36. But you should have kept your eyes open.
37. And you have no right to accuse me on the road.
38. Be in your sense. You are on the wrong side.
39. You had no right to be without good brakes.
40. Excuse me. You also don't have the right to ask me.
41. Only if you were not so rash while cycling?
42. How do you know I was on the wrong side?
43. Our rights are equal, chum!
44. Thank you for your kind advice!
45. Alright, friend; but say clearly who was on the wrong side.

2. /E/

1. I had to cross this road. I gave a signal, but you did not care. It is not my fault.
2. It is not my fault you hurt yourself.
3. But I'm not on the wrong side. You should be on the left side of the road.
4. I came as usual on this side.

4. /I/

5. /I/

5. /I/

5. /I/

6. /I/
1. Yes, I shall take care now onwards.
2. I shall be particular about it in future.
3. Of course! I'll try to be on the right side in future.
4. I'll follow your instructions.
1. (Shall we settle this among ourselves?)

5. But I was in the right.
6. But I'm coming to the correct side. I'm crossing the road. I've to go that side.

1. I hope, I have not caused you too much harm.
2. I am extremely sorry.
3. Yes, I know and I'm sorry for that.
4. Sorry!
5. Excuse me.
6. I'm sorry for that.
7. I know and regret my carelessness.
8. I'm extremely sorry. It is my mistake.
9. Sorry for my mistake.
10. I'm sorry. I beg your pardon.
11. That is true. Will you please excuse me?
12. Yes, I've committed a wrong.
13. Certainly. Excuse me.
14. Yes, of course. Extremely sorry. Thanks a lot.
15. Yes, I have not. Sorry.
16. Excuse me. Yes, I ought not to be on the wrong side. But you should not get angry with me. I'm sorry that I came on the wrong side.

1. I'm a foreigner. I don't know the rules of this place.
2. I'm sorry. I was not aware of it.
3. I did not do it thinking it a right, but it is by mistake.
4. I'm sorry. I was in such a hurry that I couldn't recognise about traffic rules.
5. Sorry. I did not notice in my hurry.
6. I'm sorry. I did not know which was the right side.
7. Yes, I know. I am not doing it for the sake of it. I was compelled to do.
8. I am sorry. I was in a hurry and forgot.
9. I know, but I had to save the child.
10. I came this side by mistake.
11. I'm sorry. I could not keep the side.
12. Sorry. I was on the wrong side unintentionally.
13. I was coming from this way. I'd no other alternative.
14. I'm sorry. I was compelled to come this side.
15. I was just trying to have a short cut.
16. Sorry for that.
17. I didn't deliberately do it.
18. I'm sorry. I did not come purposely.
19. But I've to cross the road.
20. Yes. But I was in a hurry.
21. Never did I mean the right, but I was in a hurry. It so happened. Now I cannot help.
22. I've just learned cycling. That is why I did this mistake.
23. Sorry. I could not control the movement.
24. That is quite true. I forgot about it.

COMBINATIONS

15. /E//
1. My cycle is punctured. I am sorry for the mistake. I was going on the right side.
20. /E: E/
1. But I'm on the right side. Keep to the left.
2. But I'm not on the wrong side, it is you!
3. I was riding alright. It is by your mistake that the accident occurred.
4. But you are on the wrong side. It is not my fault. I gave a signal, as I was taking a turn. You should have been more careful.
6. But I applied all the brakes. You too should have been more careful.
7. I say, I am on the right side. How do you accuse me of it?
8. I was not on the wrong side; you were!
9. But I've to stop here. Why didn't you notice my hand?
21. /E/ e
1. Don't talk about rights. Pay me the damages.
2. But what about the damage to my cycle?
23. /E: /
1. I am sorry, but nobody has got right to be on the wrong side, what about me?
2. If you think so, I'm sorry.
3. I am sorry if I'm wrong.
4. I agree, but I think I am not to be blamed altogether. I'm sorry. Thank you for your kind information. But are you on the right side?
6. No question of rights! I made a mistake and am sorry for it!
7. May be I was on the wrong side, yet you ought to drive carefully.
8. That I admit. But you should also be careful.
9. I'm sorry for that. But why did you have to smash my cycle?
10. And you too. Anyway, I'm sorry.
11. I am so sorry. But you could have been more vigilant.
25. /E: /
1. It just happened I had to save that boy. You should also have been more careful.
2. There is no question of right, unless I know which is the right side.
27. /E/ i
1. Thanks for the reminder. I'll be careful in future.
2. You are so right. What can I do about it now?
32. /E/ m
1. Only I think I'm in the right. But you may go ahead.
46. /I: /
1. Sorry. By mistake I happened to be on this side.
2. Excuse me, I was in a hurry. So sorry to have troubled you.
47. /I: i
1. Please leave me this time. I won't do again.
2. I am sorry. I'll go on right side. Can I get your cycle repaired?

48. /I/ i

3. Yes. It was my mistake. Please forgive my hurry and allow me to get your bike repaired.
4. I'm sorry. Please excuse me. I'll get the damage repaired.
5. I'm sorry. I'm prepared to repair your bicycle.
6. Well, I'm sorry. I'll pay for the damages.
7. I'm very sorry. I'll take care in future.
8. Sorry. I'll get your cycle repaired.
9. I am sorry. You see, to err is human. Let me help you please for the loss.

1. An accident is an accident. It was just chance I was on the wrong side. But I'll pay for the damages that have occurred.

SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS

is indicated by responses suggesting that the problem be solved by mutual agreement: "Shall we settle this between ourselves?"

is used when the statements express irritation with the situation, without guilt or responsibility: "It is really awful".

E//

SITUATION No. 17

A woman standing with a man beside the door of a house is reprimanding him for having lost the keys.

1. E//

1. But it is really absurd!
2. It is really awful.
3. Because I've to arrange for it now!
4. But I'm tired! What would I do!
5. And to stand and be out of our home for the whole night!
6. O! It is really pathetic!
7. Well! Well! Well! That is how it is!
8. Now what to do? We can't break open the lock also.
9. How awkward does it look!
10. That is bad.
11. We're very unlucky.
12. But what should we do without the keys?
13. But I lost my purse too!
14. Where the keys have gone?
15. What should we do without the keys?

2. /E/

1. But it is you who have lost them.
2. Fine yes. Indeed. How would you like to spend the night in some hotel?
3. I know you're very negligent to your duties.
4. Yes. You know better.
5. Fine indeed!
6. That is what I expect from you!
7. Don't be a fool.
8. How? Are you joking?

9. But it is not a fine place to be scolded by a wife.
10. For ladies, I think!
11. You take it so lightly.
12. But I don't expect you to be fussy.
13. You should not blame for things which you should take care.
14. You're very careless.
15. Where did you keep the keys? Have you seen your purse minutely?
16. Yes. What is the use of blaming me now for it?
17. I don't agree to you.
18. Don't you feel ashamed you're making fun?
19. I don't understand what you mean.
20. Let me then empty your purse in the market.
21. Why don't you carry them in your bag for a change?
22. Always you are careless. Now I have to find some solution.
23. Yes. This is also a fine time to sit outside.

2. /E/

1. No fault of mine.
2. I didn't lose it, but misplaced it somewhere, perhaps in my office.
3. Believe me, I'm not playing tricks.
4. I have not lost them. They are in my pocket.

3. /I/

1. Have you got the duplicate keys?
2. Break the lock with the aid of a blacksmith.
3. See your purse again.
4. Now break the lock.
5. Really, please try to devise a plan.
6. Sit down and think where you could have kept them.

4. /I/

1. Now what should we do?
2. I have lost them I know not where.
3. But what can I do now?
4. I don't know where they have fallen.
5. Let me see another pocket.
6. I just can't recall where else I could have put them.
7. I don't know where I've lost them. I had put them in my pocket, but—
8. I'm sorry, but I just can't remember where I kept them.
9. Well, Well, Well.
10. No mama, I can't remember where I put it.
11. I don't know if I placed them in my pocket.
12. I really don't remember where I left them.
13. What can be done about it?
14. I've lost not only the keys, but the whole purse.

5. /I/

1. I'm awfully sorry.
2. Very sorry!
3. Really I'm very much absent-minded.
4. Please forgive me.
5. Sorry I lost the keys, particularly at this time.
6. Don't be angry, my love!

5. /I/

1. Well, I did so unknowingly and not deliberately.
2. I am sorry. I think it fell down from my pocket.
3. I did not lose it intentionally.

6. /I/

4. But I can't help it. I am so upset with this habit of mine.
5. I'm sorry, I must have included the key together with the money at the shop.
6. I'm not sure whether the keys slipped out or were taken out.
7. It is not my fault. The picture was so exciting, it must have fallen in the cinema hall.
8. Well, I couldn't help it. It fell from the hole in my pocket.
9. I'm sorry, but I'm sure I kept them in my pocket.
1. I'm sorry. I'll run to Ram's house and see if it is there.
2. We'll break open the lock.
3. I think I'll call someone and break the lock.
4. Let me see if I can break open the lock. I'll go back and look for it on the way.
5. May be I'll find it.
6. Let me call some locksmith to open it.
7. I'll go back and try to find it.
8. Now we'll go to the key maker and get a new key.
9. Shall we break open the lock?
10. I will bring an iron stick and open.
11. Let me think where I left them.
12. O! Well! We'll break it by stone.
13. Now let us stay at a hotel.
14. We can spend the night at a restaurant.

9. /I/

1. Be patient. We'll look for them together and find quickly.

COMBINATIONS

10. E/I/

1. I'm feeling sleepy and you say it's a fine time.
2. You should not take it so lightly. I'm already tired and can't think of going out again.
3. For you, it is alright. What about me? I'm feeling so tired.
4. O! I'm so tired and sleepy. What do you mean by saying so? Don't play while others are serious.
5. You always make fun. I'm so much tired now what to do?

1. It is really awful. I am very sorry.

14. E/I/

1. There is no other alternative but to break the lock.

16. E/I/

1. It is your fault, not mine.

20. /E/E/

1. This is a fine time to bring out the duplicate keys from the pocket.
2. But what do you want to do further?
3. There is no fun in worrying for that. Let us see how we can get in.
4. But have I done it intentionally? Please go and ask the neighbours.

21. /E/

5. Please search each pocket nicely. I might have given it to you.
 6. Don't be impatient. Search and you may find them.
 7. This is no time to make comments. Tell me what to do now.
 8. Why don't you think what to do? You're making fun.
 9. No use quarrelling now. Let us think of some way to open the lock.
 10. Let us do something constructive and not fight over lost property.
25. /E: I/
1. Whoever loses a thing on purpose darling?
 2. You must be knowing that I've a heavy purse in my pocket.
 3. Don't nag. It isn't as if I did it on purpose.
 4. What am I supposed to do? I'd kept it in my purse. It must have slipped when I was taking out the money.
 5. What could I do? It is often for people to lose keys.
 6. The keys fell out of my pocket as you did not care to stick it.
27. /E: I/
1. What's that! If lost, what can I do? Let us break the lock.
 2. Don't joke. I'll go and search.
 3. Don't pass remarks now. I know you're getting annoyed. I'll break the lock now.
 4. Don't be angry, dear. Let me fumble for them again in my pocket.
 5. Did you look in your purse? Did you give them to me? No! I'll break the lock.
28. /E: I/
1. But did I lose it? Let me see.
 2. I have not lost the keys, but misplaced them. I'll find them out.
31. /E: m/
1. Please don't lose your temper. We can manage to open the door some throw.
33. /E: i/
1. Let us find out some other way to open the door.
 2. Wait. I'll manage to open the door.
 3. We should borrow keys from the neighbours and try to open it.
 4. Let us try our neighbours' keys and see if they would fit.
 5. Very sorry. Now we must try to search them out as quickly as possible.
 6. Please wait, let me remember where I kept it.
 7. Let us make a thorough search. If not found, let us break it and get another.
 8. Let us make some arrangement to unlock it.
 9. Just wait. Let me go and see if I've left it on A's table.
 10. Then let us break the lock.
 11. We should think some way out.
 12. Wait! let me recollect where I left them.
 13. Let us do something to get it unlocked.
 14. I don't know where I have dropped it. Shall we get the lock broken or shall we look for it?

35. /I: E/
1. Now what to do? They are lost, but don't lose your temper.
38. /I: I/
1. Sorry. I can't recollect where I misplaced them.
39. /I: I/
1. But what can I do? I just forgot where I kept them
 2. I had locked the door and put the keys in my pocket but now they are not there.
40. /I: I/
1. Nothing can be done. Let us break open the lock.
 2. I'm trying to think where I put them.
 3. I'm remembering where I lost them.
 4. I'm searching for them. I don't know where I left.
44. /I: E/
1. I should have been more careful. Let us do something now. Do help me.
 2. Sorry I lost them. Hereafter you take care of them.
47. /I: i/
1. I'm terribly sorry for all this inconvenience. I shall run and find them.
 2. I'm sorry, but never mind. I'll call the mechanic.
 3. I'm extremely sorry. I left them, I think, at my friend's place. Please don't get cross. I'll get them in no time.
48. /I: i/
1. I did not lose the key knowingly. Should I call the man who can break the lock?
 2. It was to be. Let me see if the neighbours keys are of any help; or else I'll break it.
 3. Look. I never lost them intentionally. Well, I'll go and look for them. I had them in my pocket.
51. /I: m/
1. I am sorry. But we'll have to wait till man comes to open it.
52. /I: m/
1. Oh! Sometimes things happen unhappily as if they have been planned out. They will at last be found.
59. /M: i/
1. What is that to be worried about? Let us remember where we might have lost and best be careful in future and manage now.
 2. Think of some device to have the lock open. Let us go to our neighbours and see if their keys can help. Otherwise we shall have shopping again today. What a fine thing!
 3. Don't be upset. We'll search for the lost keys.
61. /M: m/
1. Yes of course. Now we'll enjoy an outing in this pleasant weather. Let us go somewhere and return and try.
63. /M: i/
2. O! Yes. The night is pleasant. Let us go for a walk. Perhaps we'll find the keys on the road.
67. U
1. It can't be helped now. I'll break open the lock.
 2. Let us enjoy the occasion.
 2. Let us go for a picnic.

3. Let us go out for a walk. What else can be done now?
4. Let us go to a garden.
5. Let us go and take tea.
6. Yes. You are right.
7. O! Don't bother! Take it easy!

SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS

/E/ is used when the speaker flatly denies having lost the keys: ("I have not lost them; They are in my pocket's")

/I/ is employed when the response implies the speaker's share in the mishap and express consternation ("But what am I to do now?") or protests that the keys must be at "Some place". These statements are not as confident as scored under E.

// is used when the speaker admits his fault but gives some excuse for it: ("I didn't lose it intentionally".)

/i/ includes responses implying persistent search for the keys ("I'll go back and look for it on the way") or offering to take some other step to solve the problem ("Let me call some lock maker to open it").

/e:/ is employed when both persons are involved in finding out a way to solve the problem: ("Let's find out some other way to open the door.")

SITUATION NO. 18

A clerk is apologising to a customer for having just sold the last of some item.

1. E// 1. I need it so badly.
2. O! What a pity!
3. Just now?
4. I'm just disappointed by it all!
5. Well, I'm the unlucky person not to have it.
6. O! I was in dire need of it.
7. What luck!
8. I always seem to be late.
9. Don't you have any more cups and saucers? I need it very urgently.
2. /E/ 1. But a shop must not refuse a customer anything, isn't it?
2. O! Very nice of you.
3. But I informed you to wait for me.
4. Now sell your shop to me.
3. //e 1. Can't you arrange for some more with some other shopkeeper?
2. Please try to get me one somehow or other.
3. Try to find out if there is any left.

4. Well, when can you bring? I want it latest by tomorrow.
5. Could you get it from somewhere else?
6. Can you get me another one?
7. Please try to supply me tomorrow positively.
8. Would you kindly arrange one for the evening?

1. I wish I'd come in time!
2. O! I was a bit late.
3. Doesn't matter. It was my fault. I was late in coming here.

1. Then I'll go to the next shop.
2. O! Then I'll have to try at some other shop.
3. I'll purchase from some other place.
4. Thank you! I've now to go to some other shop.

1. I didn't want it. I only wanted to enquire the price.
2. Oh! You cannot have everything.

1. O! It does not matter.
2. Alright!
3. It is O.K.

1. When will it be available?
2. Can you tell me when you are getting now?
3. When can I have it next?
4. Alright. When will you get more?
5. When should I come to you for this?
6. Will you be getting the next stock soon?
7. Will you give me some other which can be used as a substitute?
8. Shall I get it tomorrow?
9. Show me something else which can serve my purpose.
10. Can you give me the next best please?
11. Is there a new stock arriving soon? I'd like you to keep one for me, if it comes within this week.
12. Will you get me one tomorrow?
13. Can't you get similar one in near future?

COMBINATIONS

10. E/E/ 1. Are you sure you've none left?
2. But you promised to supply it!
12. E//e 1. It is very urgent. Please get me one as soon as possible.
2. You sold the last one! But I want it very badly! Couldn't you get it for me from the next shop?
3. I was in very bad need. From where can I get one? Please tell me.
4. That is sad. Where else could I get it? I need it very badly.
5. Can you please tell me where shall I get it? I need it very badly.
6. That is unfortunate. Can you please tell me where else I could get it from?
- But I want it urgently. I am ready to pay more.

19. Eʃ/m

1. O! What a pity! When will you have the next stock?
2. O! I wish I could get one. Anyway, what if I place an order for it?
3. I was in very bad need. When can I get it?
4. I've tried in every shop. Well, I don't know what to do! Can you find me something similar?

21. /E/c

1. Still there are some. Please give me one.
2. Then give me the last but one.

33. /E:ɪ

1. Will you kindly tell me wherefrom I shall be able to get it?
2. Where else can I get it from?
3. Where can I get it now?
4. Where can I get another? Can you please direct me?
5. Now, from where shall I get it?
6. Will the new things come next day? Or have I to get it from another shop?

34. //e:m

1. Will you look for me and let me know when the next lot comes.
2. Reserve one for me from the next stock.

44. //e

1. I wish I'd come earlier! Where else can I go to get it?

56. M//e

1. Have you got baby's powder?

62. /M/e

1. It is alright. But keep for me when you get again.

63. /M/i

1. It does not matter. I shall get from the other shop.
2. I'll come again. I don't need it today.

64. /M/m

1. It is alright. When can you supply earliest?
2. Never mind. Now when do you get it next?

SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS

//i

is used when the speaker indicates that he will make a special effort to solve the problem: ("Then I'll go to the next shop.")

//m

is used when solutions within the limit of the present situation are indicated ("Can you give me the next best please?") or when time alone is allowed to remedy the problem ("When will it be available?")

M//e

is employed when the frustration is avoided by asking for something else to get out of the frustrating situation: ("Have you got baby's powder?")

SITUATION NO. 19

A policeman is accosting a cyclist for going without light.

2. /E/

1. Going home.
2. To the police station to see your b.w.s.
3. Back home.
4. Why? I'm just going home.
5. This is 20th century, Sir!
6. I'm going to steal!
7. Going to see a circus and not to steal.
8. To the lighthouse, sir!
9. To stroll.
10. To my girl friend's house. Her father does not like my visits.
11. To hell!
12. Now where you direct me to.
13. Home of course. You could quieten down even when you are right.
14. I'm going to college and there are numerous lights of municipality on the way.
15. I'm going home, but you want me now.
16. Nowhere, sir!
17. Well, I am going to the place I'm determined to go.
18. Home, if you take pity; or jail or court.
19. Don't be mistaken. I'm going to my friend's home only.
20. I'm in a great hurry (When no sign of regret or explanation is added).
1. As I don't have light, I'm going (walking) and not driving it.
2. But I'm not riding it.
3. That is why I'm pushing it and not riding.
4. Nowhere. I'm only returning home. I only got late.
5. It is not even 6 O'clock.
6. I found this cycle lying there and am taking it to hand over to the thana.
1. Please excuse me this time.
1. (Was my light not on?)
2. But you don't understand!
1. Yes. It is a mistake.
1. I'm sorry. I returned late from the office and forgot the light at home.
2. To my friend's house. He is seriously ill.
3. I'm sorry. I'm going to an evening college.
4. I was in a hurry and forgot to bring the light.
5. I never knew I shall be so late.
6. I have to rush to the doctor. It is an emergency.
7. I am late from the office.
8. I'm sorry. I didn't realize I'd be so late from the office.
9. I forgot today.

2. /E/

3. //e

4. I//

5. //u

5. /I/

10. Excuse me. I'm hurrying home.
11. I'm going for studying.
12. I'm just going to get it lighted, as it has lost that.
13. Just near, to see my friend.
14. It just went out.
15. I was just going to drop the letter in the letter box near here. Excuse me.
16. I went to my friends and intended to come early.
17. Somebody has stolen my light. So I'm sorry to go like this.
18. Please excuse me this time. I've to go to very important work.
19. Only today I'm going without light.
20. To the hospital.
21. I was just in hurry. (Shows contrition).
22. The battery has just failed.
23. Please excuse me. I just forgot to take the lamp.
24. I'm sorry. I meant to reach home before dark.
25. To my place. The light failed.
26. I don't know what is wrong with the light.
27. Sorry. I was in great hurry.
28. Please just read this paper.

6. //i
 1. I shall not be riding it.
 2. I shall make arrangements for light just now.
 3. I'll try to get a candlestick.
 4. (Pays the fine).

9. //m
 1. I am going to arrange for light on my cycle.
 2. I'm going to get the light on my cycle.

COMBINATIONS

20. /E:/
 1. Do not mind it. I'm walking on foot and not a robber.
23. /E:/
 1. I'm going where I've to go, but I'm sorry I forgot the lamp at home.
24. /E:/
 1. I am walking. Even then I must say I should have a light.
25. /E:/
 1. I've thought to return earlier; but now I think I'll have to go somewhere else.
 2. I thought I wouldn't be caught like this. I'd some very urgent work.
33. //e:/
 1. Let me off to-day. I'll get it fixed tomorrow.
47. //i/
 1. I'm sorry this time. I shall instal one immediately.
 2. I'm sorry I don't have one. But I'll purchase it very soon.
48. //i/
 1. O! I'd not expected to be so late. I shall walk with the bike, if you say so.
 2. Excuse me for going without light. I've no money to buy it. I'm prepared to have punishment.
 3. Sorry I forgot to put my light. Hereafter I'll never forget. I thought I may reach home early.

55. M/E/

1. Thank God! I was in search of a policeman. My cycle light has been stolen by somebody.

SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS

is employed for explanations which, given without any show of extenuating circumstances, are impertinent and express aggression. ("Going home") is used when the speaker denies riding the cycle ("But I am not riding it") or going without light on or the time being ready for lighting ("it is not even 6 O'clock").

is used when consternation alone is expressed, expressing surprise ("Was my light not on?") rather than disbelief, in which case the statement will be scored /E/. Inquiry in such a case is necessary.

is indicated by responses in which the speaker admits that he was going without light but offers some excuse: ("The battery has just failed").

SITUATION NO. 20

A girl is musing aloud to her friend as to why they were not invited to a party in an adjoining room.

1. E//

1. She did not invite us.
2. I myself don't know. I also wonder.
3. It is totally unexpected, specially when she has such nice relations with us!
4. That is what I'm wondering about!
5. God knows!
6. She is having a nice party there.
7. She should have invited us.
8. I too cannot make out the reason behind it.
9. I don't know.
10. Even I wonder. Even yesterday I met her and she never said a word.

2. /E/

1. Out of her usual whims, I suppose!
2. Because we happen to be superior to her in many ways!
3. It is rightly said, "Vanity! Thy name is woman!"
4. It is just like her. She thinks much of herself.
5. Don't mind. She'll pay.
6. It is foolish to expect invitation from such a stupid one.
7. She is too economic.
8. That is uncommon to her.
9. She has got new friends now and does not care for the old ones.
10. She might have invited only the rich.
11. She is very proud.
12. She is very selfish.

13. So what! You should do with her in future as I please.
 14. She didn't care enough.
 15. I suppose she lacks sociability.
 16. Let us break our relations with her.
 17. How rude of her! I am sure she knew we were next door. But why? Do you think it an insult?
 18. She is bore.
 19. Oh! She always forms groups and doesn't mix with all.
 20. She is a peculiar type, don't you know?
 21. You cannot depend on a woman's way of thinking.
 22. Because we'd have dominated the scene.
 23. You are ill-tempered. If she had invited, you would have said something else.
 24. Don't worry. We also won't invite her.
4. I//
 1. Good. We don't have to spend money on buying presents.
5. I//
 1. She got angry that day.
 2. She might be having some ill will towards us.
 3. She must be annoyed that we teased her.
 4. She might be resentful with us.
 5. May be she took to heart yesterday's discussion.
 6. May be because we didn't attend her sister's wedding.
 7. She might be annoyed with us.
 8. Because we didn't give her any present last time.
 9. Probably she has no affection for us anymore.
 10. Perhaps we did not invite her other day.
6. I//
 1. Let us invite her and find out the reason.
7. M//
 1. It does not matter.
 2. Never mind.
 3. Don't bother about it.
 4. Oh! I never bother myself about such things.
 5. Why are you bothered about it?
8. M/
 1. Must be some reason for it.
 2. Perhaps she'd forgotten.
 3. It is no fun inviting us, when we also know there is no room even for a single person in the cabin.
 4. She must have had a lot of guests.
 5. She surely has forgotten us.
 6. She didn't, probably because I've been out lately.
 7. With so much, she might have forgotten.
 8. Probably she didn't notice us.
 9. In such busy programmes, one easily forgets.
 10. I've heard she didn't invite any outsiders.
 11. I think it is a mistake—just a chance.
 12. That might be a slip of attention.
 13. Plain and simple. Because she has a guest.
 14. It might have gone out of her mind. She did not do it purposefully.
 15. Last chance.
 16. She wasn't having a party that we should be invited. In marriages it often happens we forget even intimate friends. Moreover, we can't trust the post office.

18. Everytime it is not possible to invite everyone. May be we do not know those people.
 19. Oh! One cannot expect her to invite us every time. Might be she has something secretly to converse with her friend.
 20. Must be a meeting of elders. Let us do something else.
 21. They could not have enjoyed in a big crowd.
 22. She does not believe in mixing groups. In a way, it is nice.
 23. Because it was plain tea.
 24. She has invited only relatives and not friends.
 25. To err is human.
9. I/m
 1. Perhaps she'll invite us for the second batch.

COMBINATIONS

10. E/E/
 1. At least, you should have been invited, being next door.
 2. She should have. You were such good friends.
18. E/M/
 1. May be her inadvertence in doing so. If deliberately, let us discuss why.
 2. I also wonder! Perhaps she forgot in the rush.
27. I/E/
 1. Never mind. We'll invite her and thus she'll realize her negligence towards us.
29. I/E,M/
 1. It is her sweet will.
 2. She is not a mixing sort of lady.
 3. She must be angry with you. I'm not so intimate as to be invited every now and then. I'm not sorry for it.
 4. Well, it is to her. What can I say?
 5. That is her concern.
 6. Don't think of it. If she doesn't, it is her wish.
 7. Why should we worry about it? It is her business.
 8. Yes, she must be in the company of her boy-friend.
 9. Is it necessary she should invite every friend?
 10. She invites only the couples.
 11. It is quite possible she has forgotten, but I think she never wanted us.
49. I/L,M/
 1. It is a feeling. You cannot after all force it. Possibly we might also give some impression that was indifferent and unfriendly.
 2. She must be having some difference of opinion.
 3. She must be angry with us or perhaps she forgot.
 4. Because we already owe a tea to her.
 5. Might be due to some unavoidable reasons for we're not on good terms.
 6. She has invited only intimate friends.
57. M//
 1. What does it matter? Perhaps we have not been as friendly as we might be.

60. M/M/

1. You should not take such small matters so seriously. Perhaps she couldn't afford it.
2. Why bother about it?
3. She must be having something personal to talk with her friends. Does it matter?
4. They might be having some private things. It does not matter. She is a very nice lady.
5. Still we should not mind it. There must have been something really serious which didn't let her do it.
6. What is there to think about in this? Probably she wanted to talk to them about something important.
7. Leave it. It is a matter of her choice.
8. Don't mind it. She invites us always.

63. /M/i

1. Perhaps there is some misunderstanding. It is for us to find out.

64. /M/m

1. There might be some solid reason. Let us wait.
2. She does not like to make others uncomfortable in the presence of strangers. She'll call us after their departure.

65. /E:/

1. Probably she does not think we are her friends or as smart as her.
2. You know we are not her fast friends. She invites us only when she does not have any fast friend there.
3. She couldn't have wanted us!
4. She did not think us worthy of being invited.
5. She must have found some other friends.
6. Obviously, she has more interesting company.

66.

M/E/

1. Who bothers? I'd never like to have relations with such persons.
2. It is a trifling affair.
3. Let her not. Why should we bother?
4. I wouldn't have gone even if she had.
5. Let her do so.

67. U

is used for aggressive remarks in which no inferiority or guilt is apparent ("She is very selfish") aggression displaced to the person present in the picture ("Why wonder? You also didn't invite her"), irritation at not being invited ("That is uncommon to her") scores responses where inferiority or guilt, directly or indirectly expressed, supplies reasons for not being invited. The guilt may be for some previous action responsible for the present situation ("She must be annoyed that we teased her") or for some implied inferiority ("Probably she has no affection for us any more").

is an intrinsic combination score, used when inferiority or guilt are expressed with self-reference and projection. The responses is especially apparent when the remark takes the form of contrast between the women: ("Probably she thinks we are not as smart as her", "Obviously she has more interesting company".)

is indicated by responses which attribute the lack of an invitation to valid reasons rather than malice on the part of the hostess ("She has invited only relatives, not friends") or which deny the situation ("She wasn't having a party that she should invite us").

M/E/

is employed for "sour grape" responses - ("Who bothers? I'd never like to have relations with such persons.")

SITUATION No. 21

A woman is reprimanded for saying mean things about someone who was in an accident the day before and is now in the hospital.

2. /E/

1. Well, she has suffered for her actions.
2. So, what can we do? It is her own luck.
3. She deserves it.
4. She deserved this punishment.
5. That is very good. She should have it.
6. Fit for her!
7. Serves her right!
8. That is good. She should reap what she has sown.
9. It is all the more good. She'll commit no more bad acts.
10. Serves her right. Hope she survives and leads a better life.
11. God sees everything and rewards and punishes according to one's action.
12. God is the best Judge.
13. Very good!
14. She is a bad woman.
15. We won't pretend to sympathise, now that you know our opinion about her.
16. Is it so? We do not know whether to laugh or cry.
17. O! It is not her first accident.

2. /E/

1. But we were right. We were not wrong.
2. What difference does it make?
3. What does it matter whether she is in hospital or not?
4. We did not say that so that she may get involved in any accident.
5. We were not talking about her, but another one with the same name.
6. We never meant she should be victim of an accident.
7. You are mistaken. We were talking of other things.
8. We did not say anything in that way. Anyway, we were not prepared for what you said just now.
9. You are mistaken.
10. Oh! You are misguided.

1. Oh! The poor thing! How is she? What do the doctors say?
2. Is it so?
3. Poor lady!
4. We are so sorry for it.
5. Is it really? How bad!
6. Ah! We're really feeling very bad.
7. How sad!
8. Oh! how bad! May god help her, to a quick recovery.
9. Really sorry for her!
10. How is she?
11. Oh! Is she?
12. Is she badly hurt?
13. What a pity! We are sorry. Hope she'll be saved.
14. Godly! We're sorry. How is she now?
15. God save her! She is actually suffering.
16. How did the accident take place?
17. What accident?
18. Wish her a speedy recovery!
19. Oh! God!
20. Oh! It is bad luck for her!
21. May she be alright! Hope she is not seriously injured.
22. Is she really in the hospital?
1. I'm very much ashamed of it.
2. O! We should not talk against anyone.
3. Poor woman! I wish I hadn't said those things.
4. How bad of us to have said bad things about her!
5. O! We're very sorry. We should not do like this.
6. O! God forgive me! Teach me to give up this habit.
7. I'm sorry for it. Let us forget all that we said.
1. We didn't know
2. Sorry. I didn't know it.
3. Really, we are sorry to have misunderstood her.
4. We mistook someone else for her.
5. At that time I was angry with her.
6. We are sorry to have misunderstood her.
1. Let us go to the hospital.
2. Shall we go and see her? Poor thing!
3. O! hurry up! We must go and see her.
4. We must go and look her up.
5. O! Please tell me in which hospital.
6. Shall we go and see her?
7. Please tell us the hospital, ward no. and bed no.
8. Oh! God! I must go and see her. I really like her.
1. The woman is recovering.
1. (I am glad you told me about it).

COMBINATIONS

1. Poor thing! We did not mean all that we said about her. I don't know why people take it so seriously.

1. How can we help it? It is her fate.
1. Oh! What a pity! We shouldn't have said so. God is there to see and judge people.
1. Oh! It is too much punishment.
2. Poor thing! Hope she gets well soon. May be God is punishing her.
3. I pray she may recover soon, as only God is just.
4. I'm sorry to know that though I think she deserves it all.
5. Who told you? In which condition is she? She deserves it.
6. Do you have any news of that foolish lady?
7. Oh! so. It might be due to her negligence.
8. How horrible! If she had liked she would have become better.

1. I'm sorry. But I still feel the same way.
2. Oh! We're very sorry for it. But we know her quite well.
3. Ah! That is really bad. After all, we did not have any ill will for her.

1. Oh! I never meant that way. How is she?
2. I'm sorry for those words. I hope she gets well soon.
3. That is bad. How did it happen? Wish I hadn't been so mean to her.
4. Oh! I cannot forgive myself for saying such unkind things. I hope she is better now.
5. Though by mistake, we may have said something, we wish her recovery.
6. Poor thing! There is something good in the worst of us. How sad! After all, she was not a bad person.
7. Is it? She was really a fine lady.
1. Is it? I'm sorry. I know nothing.
2. But I never meant her any harm. Oh, the poor thing!
1. Ah! So sorry. We must go to look for her.
2. O! I'm astonished at this. Poor thing! I must see her.
3. Is it? I'm very sorry to hear it. Which hospital is she in? I must go to visit her.
4. Is it so? We are sorry for her. Let us go and look her up.
5. I'll go to see her. It is sad news.
6. What happened? We did not know about it. Which hospital is it? We must go and see her.
7. Very sorry to hear it. We didn't wish her to be involved in an accident. In which hospital? We want to meet her.
9. Is it so? Let's go and see.

1. We are sorry. We actually did not mean it.
2. At that time I was angry with her. Now I'm sorry.
1. Oh! I'm terribly sorry. I didn't mean to say anything. I'd look her up. In which hospital is she?

2. Oh! We're sorry. We said that only in a mood of anger. Come, we want to see her now.
3. Oh! dear! We should go and look her up! It was very wrong on our part to have back chatted.
4. Oh! so sad news. Let us see her in the hospital. Whatever our qualities, we are human beings.
5. In future, we'll never say anything bad against anyone.
1. We never knew it. Now we won't say such things.

SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS

is indicated when emphasis is placed on accident and the problem of the speaker's guilt is ignored. When "I'm sorry" occurs alone, this is assumed to refer only to the accident, i.e., to mean "I'm sorry to hear that"; thus it is scored 1'.

is used when the speaker explicitly expresses regret for having said mean things ("How bad of us to have said bad things for her), or takes back what she said ("Poor woman. I wish I had never said those things").

SITUATION No. 22

A man who has fallen down, is being asked whether he is hurt.

1. E//
1. Yes, dear, I have.
2. Yes. I was trying to defend my side in the playfield and fell down.
3. O! Yes! I cannot get up.
4. Yes. I slipped on the banana.
5. Yes. I did.
6. Yes.
7. Yes. I just slipped and fell down. My elbow is badly hurt.
8. Yes. I've an injury on my hips.
9. Very badly.
10. No doubt.
11. O! I've sprained my ankle, I think.
12. I don't know yet.
13. Oh! Oh! Wait. Let me get up.
14. O! I've to go very urgently to a place and all my clothes are soiled. Thank you for your enquiry.
15. O! I'm undone.
16. I slipped and fell.
17. Yes. I fell on the ground.
2. //
1. These people do not know a simple thing not to throw banana skins.
2. Well, can't you see?
3. Why should I?
4. Instead of helping, you're cutting jokes. I'll see you some day.
5. God should give civic sense to everyone.
6. Why don't you do something to help him?
7. Don't talk about it.

8. O! These bloody fools! Banana peels!
9. And do you think he is acting? Help him, man, if you are of some worth to anyone.
10. You stop talking to me. First you have fallen me down and now you're asking me.
11. What else?
12. This rascal is responsible for this.
13. Oh! You are asking as if I've done it knowingly.
14. No, I was acting.

1. (Please help me).

1. It is alright.
2. No, it is alright.
3. Oh! No! I don't know how I feel.
4. No! no! I'm perfectly alright. You should not worry.
5. No! My foot just slipped on the banana skin. It is alright.
6. Oh! no! I'm alright. Thank you.
7. No, I just slipped on a banana peel.
8. Oh! no! Thank you so much.
9. No! I just slipped. It is alright.
10. Don't worry. I didn't get hurt.
11. No, I just fell down.
12. Ha! Ha! I had a fall.
13. No.
14. No. Thanks! I just slipped.
15. No, no, no, I'm getting up.
16. No, it is alright.
17. No, not at all.
18. No, thank you. It was a pleasant experience.

1. I tried my best to avoid, but could not.
2. No, it was not my mistake.

7. M//

1. Just a little.
2. Not too much.
3. Not much.
4. Just a little bruise. Thank you.
5. After all, it was not a serious fall.
6. No, it was not so bad.
7. No, just felt a bang and a bit shaken.
8. I don't think so.
9. Not much, thanks!
10. No, no, only slightly.
11. Not very much. I've got some pain here.
12. A little.
13. Not so badly as you presume.
14. Just a little bit. Thanks for your kind enquiry.
15. A little. Thank you very much for your sympathy.
16. Perhaps. But it is fun to fall sometimes.
17. No, I think I'm alright.
18. After all, it was not a serious fall.
19. I think so, but not much.
20. O! never mind. We should not care for such a little thing.
21. Silly, I think anyway, I can still walk. So, I suppose it is O.K.

COMBINATIONS

10. E/E/
1. Yes. I did and I'm also rather annoyed.
 2. Let me get up first and then I'll tell you.
 3. Bloody road. Badly!
 4. Yes. I did. Do you think I'm made of stone?
 5. Can't you see? I'm suffering and you are laughing.
 6. How stupid! People throw banana skins on the road and I'm badly hurt.
12. E//e
1. Yes. I did. Could you help me?
 2. Badly. Call for the ambulance.
13. E//V//
1. Yes. I'm alright now. But it was a bad slip.
14. E//V/
1. Yes. We ourselves are our enemies.
 2. O! Yes. But it was not your fault. I feel I should be very careful.
 3. Yes. But I did not walk carefully.
17. E, M//
1. No, by hurting himself, he has hurt me.
18. E//M/
1. Yes. But he tried to save me.
19. E//m
1. Yes I've hurt in my leg. But it will be alright after a few minutes.
21. /E/c
1. What are you looking at? Come and help me get up.
27. /E/i
1. It is a good show for you to laugh. I shall learn the lesson of being more careful while walking.
41. I, M//
1. Thank you. I did not hurt myself. I'm saved, just a scratching only.
 2. No, except for the clothes, I'm alright.
 3. Thank You! I didn't hurt myself. I'm saved. There is a little scratching.
43. I//m
1. Oh! no! I'll be alright.
56. M//e
1. O! a little! I will get up. Don't worry. Just help me to get up. Please help me get up. I'll try to walk and see.
 2. Not very much. Please help me get up. I'll try to walk and see.
58. M//l/
1. Yes. it was slippery. But I haven't been hurt much.
61. M//m
1. Only slightly. That will heal soon.
 2. Just a bit. I'll be O.K.
67. U
1. How did it happen?

SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS

E//
is used when the effect of the response is to emphasise or to magnify the injury: ("Very badly", "Yes dear, I have".)

I//

is indicated by emphatic denial of injury that suggests embarrassment at having become involved in such a situation and the other's solicitude: ("No. It is alright") includes responses in which the importance of the injury is minimised as if to alleviate the others' concern: ("Just a little"). The distinction between I' and M' is on the basis of the degree of emphasis placed on the denial.

SITUATION No. 23

A woman dressed for travel reads out to a man surrounded by luggage that the auntie wants them to wait till she arrives to bless them.

1. E//

2. /E/

1. How can we wait? We're already late.
 2. We'll miss the train in that case.
 3. I'm getting late, please!
 4. We're already late.
 5. What to do?
 6. In this way, you'll miss the train.
 7. Oh! But we are all ready to go.
 8. And if in the meantime, the train comes?
 9. But you know the train is to leave soon.
 10. O! What is this?
 11. This is too much we shall miss the train.
 12. But we do not have any more leave left.
 13. But we'll get late for the train.
 14. But we've bought ticket for to-day's train.
 15. We'll get delayed.
 16. Will she come in time?
 17. How long have we to wait?
 18. Need we to stay?
1. But we can't wait.
 2. We have no time to wait.
 3. How clever she is! I know she wants to pass her summer here.
 4. My God! Your auntie should go to hell.
 5. O! Why for God, she wants us to wait?
 6. I don't see why these old people interfere so much.
 7. She has selected a very opportune moment!
 8. Better that she had offered her blessings in the letter.
 9. Is she coming today?
 10. Too nice of her! What more?
 11. Sooner she finished with it, the better!
 12. She should give herself her blessings.
 13. Poor dear aunt and her bundle of blessings! Extra luggage!
 14. So I how long do you think I should wait!
 15. We've no time to wait. Let us go.
 16. Really! I'm tired of this auntie business.
 17. That stupid auntie of yours! Well, I'm not waiting!
 18. What a wretched thing!
 19. I have already booked the seats. It is too late now.
 20. Whatever for?

21. I can't wait for your auntie. I've to report for work.
 22. How many times she wants to bless us?
 23. What the devil does she mean? We can't wait.
 24. Thrashings or blessings?
 25. Blessings for what? I know it is an excuse to visit us.
 26. What does she think? Will the train wait for her?
 27. Oh! again!
 28. We've got her blessings once. Get ready or we'll be late.
 29. I'm already late. I don't want her blessings.
 30. I do not think we need her blessings.
 31. What special gifts are her bringing?
 32. Let the coolie take the luggage and proceed.
 33. You may wait. I'm going away.
 34. Tell the servant to inform aunt we've left for the station.
 35. Let us hurry up!
 36. Your auntie is kind enough (too kind!).
 37. Oh! God! We must shift to our neighbour's house.
 38. It means she forgot everything as soon as she dropped the card.
1. Please try to let her free as early as possible.
 2. Tell her to come soon.
 3. Let us see if she comes in time.
 4. We'll wait for another 5 minutes more!
 5. Ask her to wait.
1. Very affectionate—I like her.
 2. O! It is good news!
 3. How nice to have her news!
 4. Thank God she is no longer angry with us.
 5. Very good. It is always nice to have our relatives.
 6. Write to her that we'll always welcome her.
1. (We will stop at her house).
 2. We can wait for her, still there is sometime.
 3. Surely we will do so. There is absolutely no hurry.
1. It is so kind of her.
 2. How nice she is!
 3. O! How sweet of her!
 4. How sweet and sympathetic she is!
 5. How kind of her to come again to bless us!
1. Well, we can wait here till she comes.
 2. O sure! We must depart with the blessing of elders.
 3. Then let us wait till she comes.
 4. Alright. Let us wait for her.
 5. Let us wait then.
 6. Alright. Let us wait. Otherwise she will be sorry.
 7. O.K. We shall wait and get her blessings.
 8. Let us wait if it pleases her.
 9. Let us take her blessings.
 10. Then do wait.

12. Certainly, let us. We should not annoy elders for such small things.
13. We should not disappoint her.
14. O.K.
15. I think we should wait and have her blessing we should not disappoint her this time.
16. Let us wait to welcome her. We'll go by the next train.
17. We'll wait for sometime.

COMBINATIONS

10. E/E/
 1. It is not necessary. I'm on an urgent engagement. But we are getting late. Why does she want to give us blessings again?
 2. Should we miss the train for her blessings?
 3. O! What sort of sentimental attachment you have. We're getting late and you're after your auntie!
 4. I'm already getting late. I do not want her blessings.
 5. Her blessings are not going to help us reach the station in time.
 6. But it is time for the train. Send her an affectionate note quickly, asking to excuse us.
 7. She has selected a very opportune moment!
12. E//e
 1. I wish she'd hurry as it is getting late.
 2. Then she must come soon. Otherwise we'll miss the train.
18. E/M/
 1. That is excellent. But I fear we should not miss the train.
19. E//m
 1. I'm in a hurry; still let us wait as she has written so eagerly.
 2. Let us do so then. Hope it won't be long.
 3. O! God! Anyway, let us wait. After all, she is an old lady.
 4. Let her come. But we should be late.
21. /E/e
 1. No, I'm sorry. I cannot wait. She may see me at the station.
 2. No. I can't wait anymore. Tell her to come to our place and bless us.
27. /E/i
 1. But we cannot. The train leaves in 10 minutes. We'll leave a note for her.
 2. But we can't wait. We should inform her.
31. /E/m
 1. Let her come. Blessing is essential for her, when-ever anyone goes out.
 2. O! auntie and her blessings! I suppose we'll have to wait.
 3. We must wait for her.
 4. O! This old lady! O.K. Let her come. I shall wait.
35. I/E/
 1. How nice of her! But we cannot wait for her.

98

43. T//m

1. How wonderful! Let us wait and get her blessings.
2. Oh, she's so good. I like her. We must wait for her.

53. //i: m

1. Now we have to wait for the next train then or let us go to her house.
2. Let us wait for sometime. If she does not turn up, we'll reply.

62. /M/e

1. It is nice of her. But I hope she comes quickly.

63. /M/i

1. Let us postpone our departure. After all she has taken all this trouble in her old age.
2. I know she loves us very much, but we will miss our train. Let us send her a message.

64. /M/m

1. She is so interested. We had better wait.
2. Let us wait for her. She is our sweet aunt.
3. Let us wait for her. After all, she is so affectionate.
4. How nice she is! Really she has great affection for us. Let us wait here.
5. How kind of aunt to remember us! We are ready to welcome her.

SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS

E// is used for the responses in which the frustration (inconvenience) is emphasised: ("How can we wait? We are already late")

/E/ is indicated when aggression is directed toward Annite by insulting and rude remarks ("That stupid aunt of yours!") Sarcasm ("Too nice of her! What more?") insinuation ("How clever she is! I know she wants to pass her summer here"), refusal to conform ("But we can't wait")

//e is used for statements that require Auntie to adjust ("Tell her to come soon") or that limit the waiting time with implication for Auntie to adjust (we'll wait for another 5 minutes").

T// is used for responses expressing pleasure in the situation as a demonstration of Auntie's love: ("Very affectionate. I like her").

/i is employed when the speaker suggests to do something more than waiting to solve the problem: ("We will stop at her house").

M//

is used when it is implied that waiting is not difficult, with or without mentioning whether they will wait. ("We can wait. There is still some time") is employed when Auntie is praised for her action: ("It is so kind of her").

/M/

A man returning a torn newspaper explains apologetically that the baby tore it.

1. E//

1. Now how am I to read it? I do not know.
2. But I haven't read it and I was searching for it.
3. What am I to do with this torn up paper?
4. You know I'd to read this paper which you've torn.

2. /E/

1. Is it the first time you say that?
2. You can give old newspapers to the baby, so that he does not destroy the new ones.
3. You've done very well!
4. If you don't know how to use other's things get out of the habit of borrowing.
5. One should never give you anything.
6. You should have kept it carefully.
7. How careless you are!
8. (An angry glare).
9. Now what else you want for your dear baby?
10. Please try to handle it properly in future.
11. For the future, see it doesn't go into baby's hands.
12. You should have been careful. It is not the baby's fault, as it is his nature.
13. Really bad on your part. You should at least take care of borrowed things.
14. Sorry won't do. It was your duty to be careful.
15. Don't you have toys to please your children?
16. You always say like this. Please do not take my paper any more.
17. Is it good on your part?
18. Everytime he does it. Thank God you know it now.
19. Oh! This baby tears everything she gets.
20. Please take care when you borrow it in future that you return it in the same condition as you took.
21. I knew it before hand. Now take it with you.
22. I don't know why you people are so careless.
23. Please keep it with you. Your baby will have good toys.
24. Let him play with it a little while longer (sarcasm and anger).
25. Thank you for having brought it. Yesterday's news paper even you did not give.
26. Alright. Keep it here (Exasperation).
1. Can you give my paper back as I need it?
2. Never mind. I've already read it.
3. It's alright. I don't need it anymore.
4. Does not matter. We just burn the old newspaper.
5. You needn't bother. It is a day old now.
6. Don't bother. I'm not going to read it again.
7. There is no need to return it. It is such a little thing.
8. It is alright. I can read it even now. It does not matter.

8. /M/

10. Doesn't matter. It is a very little mistake.
11. It can still be read.

1. Don't mind. It is alright.
2. It is alright. Children always do this.
3. No matter. My baby is the same.
4. Mention not.
5. No matter. It happens sometimes.
6. How sweet of the baby! (On enquiry)
7. Who can blame the children! Never mind.
8. No matter. Let it be.
9. What is there? Thank you.
10. Then what is the matter? It is alright. Children are naughty by nature. Why are you feeling sorry?
11. Never mind.
12. Oh! It always happens when children are in the house.
13. That is alright. Don't worry.
14. I have naughty babies. Give my love to the baby.
15. Never mind. I also have babies. They love to tear things.
16. Doesn't matter. Children are not aware of what is to be done and what not.
17. Never mind. Children are so mischievous, aren't they?

1. I usually am very careful with them.
2. And I was sorry when you borrowed it. Neither a borrower nor a lender be.
3. What were you doing when the baby did this? It is too bad. I want it.
4. How did the baby get it?
1. I haven't read it. I suppose I'll manage.
2. Never mind. Of course, it was of importance, but I'll order for its second copy.
1. Well it is alright. But I hadn't read it.
2. No, no, it is alright. What can be done now?
3. It is alright, though I've not read it yet. But it is not your fault. Your baby is innocent. What does he know about it?
4. I'm in the habit of collecting and cutting important news in the newspaper. Any way, we cannot blame the child much.
5. Doesn't matter. Perhaps it was destined to be torn.
1. What can't be cured must be endured.
1. It does not matter. But please make your children learn how to keep things in their proper form.
2. Doesn't matter. But you should be careful with others' things.
3. But you should have kept it in some safe place.
4. It is alright now, but don't allow your baby to do like that.

19. E'/m

29. /E; M/

5. Never mind, but care for others' things.
6. No matter if the baby has done it. But do take care of things, mine or yours.
7. That is alright. But please be more careful in future.
8. It is alright (A feeling of helplessness and disgust)
9. I don't mind as it is the baby who did it and not you.
10. Children do react violently to strange objects round the house.

VI

COMPILATION OF THE SCORE SHEET

After the responses on a P-F Study Booklet are scored, these should be entered in the Score Sheet which should be compiled for purposes of interpretation. The various steps in the compilation of the Score Sheet are described here. A sample Score Sheet is included to illustrate the various steps.

ITEM SCORES AND GCR

On the left hand portion of the Score Sheet is the space for writing item scores (see Figure 1). The 24 situations are represented by numbers from 1 to 24. The score for each situation is entered against its number. The factors in a single score can be entered into any one or more columns of the type—O-D, E-D and N-P.

At the end of the "Item scores" portion is the place for entering the GCR score. It may be obtained by comparing the scores of the subject on each item with the expected ones as printed in the Score Sheet. For specific purpose, expected or criterion scores as appearing in Table 6 can be used instead. When more than one criterion is given, any of these or any combination of these should be taken as full agreement. If, however, as occasionally happens, a combination score is obtained for a response and only part of it agrees with the GCR criterion, part credit (usually half) is given. Full agreements can be entered as '+' in the margin against the item numbers and part credits as '1/2' (See Figure 1). The number of credits are then added (a full credit being counted as 1 and a part credit as 1/2). The total number is converted into a percentage on the basis of the total possible criterion items. In case some responses are unscorable, these are regarded as failures to meet the criterion, the base for the percentage still remaining the same. In order to facilitate calculation of percentage, Appendix A can be used.

Example: In the sample protocol, the obtained scores agree with the criterion scores fully in 9 situations (Nos. 1, 2, 3, 9, 10, 16, 19, 21, 24). There is one half-agreement (No. 5) for which 1/2 score is obtained. Thus the total GCR score comes to be 9.5. In order to convert this into percentage let us consult Appendix A. In the first column appear the cases for which the percentage has to be calculated. As GCR is given only for 12 cases, we see the row beginning with 12 on the left side. Let us locate 9.5 figure in the first row and then read the figure given at the end of the column 9.5 (intersecting with row of 12). The figure obtained is 79, and so 79 is entered as the percentage.

PROFILE AND DEVIATION PATTERN

In this section of the Score Sheet the total number of times that any of the scoring factors has been entered under the first half (1 to 12 situations) and the second half (13 to 24 situations) under Item Scores is recorded, and totals for the six categories (both for the two halves and for the whole) are obtained and the percentages of the totals for the whole are entered. In this computation any division between scoring factors for a given item is calculated on a proportionate basis, each factor being given equal weight. Thus, if a response has been scored $1E/2$, the item would contribute .5 to the sum of E and .5 to the sum of E. The percentages for type and direction of aggression are based upon a maximum denominator of 24, since each item in the Study counts as a unit in the total scoring. If, however, any item is omitted by a subject or has been marked unscorable by the examiner, the denominator would be lower accordingly. It may be noted here that this is different from the procedure adopted for GCR (see previous section) where the base of percentage remains 12, unscorable and unresponded items being regarded as failures to meet the criterion. Appendix A can be used for percentage conversion here also.

Each square, made up by the two types of categories (e.g. by O-D column and E-A row) is divided into 4 cells. Totals for the first half items (i.e. 1 to 12) are to be entered in the left hand upper cell while those for the second half (i.e. 13 to 24) in the right half lower cell. The row and column totals for the two halves may be entered in the squares given at the end. The totals for the whole category and the percentages may be entered in the appropriate places.

Example: In the sample case, if we look up the O-D column of Item Score we find that in the first half E occurs as a full score 4 times (Nos. 3, 8, 11, 12) and as a half score once (No. 6). So we enter 4.5 in the upper left hand cell of the square of O-D E-A. In the second half E occurs once as a full score (No. 14) and 3 times as a half score (Nos. 18, 20, 23). The total for E, in the second half is $1 + 1\frac{1}{2} = 2.5$; we enter this number in the lower right hand cell. E occurs only in the second half, 3 times. So we enter 3 in the lower right hand cell of the square of O-D and E-A, but nothing in the upper left hand cell. As there is no M, the cells of the square of O-D and M-A remain vacant.

Looking up the E-D column we find that E occurs 2.5 times in the first half (twice as a full score in Nos. 9 and 10, and once as a half score in No. 4) and only once as a half score in the second half (No. 20). So we enter 2.5 and .5 respectively in the upper left hand and the lower right hand cells of the square of E-D and E-A. Similarly other factors are entered.

SUPER-EGO (S-E) PATTERNS

S-E patterns are calculated to provide a measure of a subject's "defensiveness" either in denying the commission of a wrong (E), or in repudiating the reprehensible motivation connected with such behaviour (I). The two super-ego deviants are considered in relation to the factors E and I and the category M-A. It is easy to consider the frequency of both with and without the inclusion of E, and to do likewise for I. Moreover, since M-A and I both involve absolution from blame—by either excusing someone else or by excusing oneself—it is helpful to consider them together.

Example: In the sample case E does not occur at all; and I occurs in 2 items, making 8% of the 24 item score. The sum of E and I is also 2 (8%). E (from total of the square of E-D) and E-A) 3; and the difference between this and E is also 3 (12%); $1 - 1$ is 2.5 (10%). The total of M-A is 4.5, which added to the value of I gives 6.5 (27%). All these values are entered under S-E Patterns.

TRENDS

The analysis of trends is the next aspect of the Score Sheet requiring attention. It is possible for the subject to change with recognizable consistency in the course of the test from any type or direction of response to any other mode, and even to change back again or to some third kind of behaviour before reaching the end. Any such sequence is obviously important for an understanding of reactions to frustration, since much depends in such behaviour upon the individual's reactions to his own reactions. Thus a subject may begin his record by showing considerable extroversion, scored perhaps in the E-D column, only to shift after eight or nine responses, which have perhaps by then aroused sufficient feeling of guilt, to a consistently introverted kind of reaction. The shift may appear in the E-D column itself as a second-column trend. It is similarly possible for responses to predominate in one column—regardless of direction—in the earlier part of the record and then give way to a consistent run in one of the other columns. The convention for stating these trends employs arrows at the head of which is placed the scored factor or category to which attention is to be called. A positive trend (away from) is one in which the factor or category in question predominates in the first half of the record (No. 1-12); the opposite (towards) is a negative trend.

The formula for calculating the value of a trend is $\frac{a-b}{a+b}$ in which a is the amount of the factor in the first half (No. 1 to 12) of the test and b is the amount of the factor in the second half (No. 13 to 24). These respective amounts can be read out from the profile of the Score Sheet, both for the factors and categories. In order to facilitate the calculation of trends Appendix B can be used. The Appendix gives trend values of .20 and above. The table has been adapted from a similar one appearing in the Japanese manual (Sumida et al, 1957).

How to use Appendix B: The Appendix gives trend values of .20 and above when the values of a and b are known. If the value of a (i.e. the figure in the upper left cell) is greater than the value of b (i.e. the figure in the lower right cell), the trend is positive. If the value of b is greater than that of a the trend is negative.

For seeing the value of the trend consult Appendix B. Which ever value is higher (a or b) should be seen in the first column and the lower value should be seen in the first row. The value of the trend can be read where these intersect. The use of the Appendix will be clear from the example discussed below.

To appear as significant, a trend must be based on at least four items of the total study i.e. the total of the upper left and the lower right cells (in the case of categories) should be at least 4. The trend should have a minimum value to be recognised as significant. These values have been worked out for the Indian population (Parcek & Kumar, 1965) and are given in Table 2. The values in Table 2 are for the composite group; for special research purposes the value for the two sex groups may be used.

TABLE 2

The Score Sheet provides for calculation of 5 types of trends. The first three are called 'within column trends', as they consider the direction of aggression in each of the three columns for each type of aggression. The fourth and fifth are 'cross trends', the former taking into consideration the categories of directions of aggression, and the latter only those of types of aggression. We can summarise the position as follows. The total number of possible trends is 15, of which each may be either positive or negative.

Trend No.

Concerned With

1. E', I', M'
2. E, I, M
3. e, i, m
4. E-A, I-A and M-A
5. O-D, E-D, N-P

Example: In the sample case if we look up the O-D column of the Profile we find no factors differing sufficiently in the first and second halves. The same is true of E-D and N-P columns. So 'none' is written against trends 1, 2 and 3. Now we look up the totals of the rows of the types (the 4th trend). We find that for E-A totals the figures for the upper cell (first half of the study) and the lower cell (second half) are 7.5 and 4 respectively. As the first figure is higher, the trend is positive. When we consult Appendix B, we look up 7.5 in the first column and 4 in the first row, and read the figure where the column and the row meet; the value of .30 can be read. Since 'a' (amount in first half) is more than 'b' (amount in second half) the sign would be plus, and so we get the trend value of +.30 (significant trend away from B). The value is then entered with an arrow with the mark to indicate 'away from' E-A. Further, in case of I-A, the figure for first half is 3 and for the second half 5, which gives a value of -.25 (see Appendix B). The trend being significant (see Table 2) is entered after the trend for E-A. In the row of M-A the figures of 1.5 and 3 for upper and lower cells give the value of the trend as -.33. Thus for the 4th trend, we enter all the three trends.

Now let us consult the totals of the columns of the directions. The figures for the two halves of O-D do not show significant difference. The categories of E-D and N-P show trend values of +.20 and -.25 respectively, and these are significant according to Table 2. So we enter these as the 5th trend. It may be noted that arrow with left hand mark is used to indicate 'away from' (plus value) and with right hand mark as 'towards' (minus value) of a trend.

TOTAL PATTERN

In calculating the total pattern, the three factors occurring most frequently in the record—regardless of type or direction of aggression—are entered in the order of their frequency and related to each other by the symbols for greater, less or equal.

Example: In the sample case 'E' occurs 7 times which is the highest frequency. This is followed by I (4.5), and then by I' and E (both having frequency of 3). The pattern is written showing that E' is greater than I which is greater than I' and E which are equal to each other.

VII

NORMS

After the compilation of the Score Sheet, which requires careful scoring, analysis of the record by totalling various scoring values and calculation of trends and pattern, the various scoring values have to be compared with available norms, for purposes of interpretation. The norms presented here are intended to serve this purpose.

The norms are based, as already indicated, on a population of 800 adults of both sexes.

SCORING CATEGORIES

The various statistics (mean, median, range, standard deviation) for the six scoring categories (type of reaction and direction of aggression) in terms of percentages were calculated for both sexes for the mixed sample. The figures appear in Table 3.

SCORING FACTORS

Similar figures for the various nine scoring factors are presented in Table 4. The figures are based on raw scores obtained for these various factors.

SUPER-EGO FACTORS

Statistics for the two super-ego factors and the four super-ego patterns, in terms of percentages, are given in Table 5.

GROUP CONFORMITY RATING

Group Conformity Rating (GCR) is a measure of conformity of an individual score to the modal responses of his group. The criterion scores for the GCR are designed to reflect the modal response or responses to the item given by a normal sample of the population.

The modal response as just defined must be separated from the next most frequent type of scored response by a difference that is statistically significant with a critical ratio of at least 3.0 (The standard error of the difference between percentages is used in this determination.) If it should turn out that the critical ratio is less than 3.0, then the second most frequent scored response is added as a criterion for GCR in addition to the first—so that either the most frequent or the next most frequent sort of response is acceptable for GCR purposes. However, the significance of the difference between the second most frequent response and the third most frequent must now be tested. As before, the difference should be statistically significant (CR 3.0) in order for the problem to be closed. Otherwise a third type of score is included, provided that the frequency of it is again significantly differentiated from the next most frequent mode of response by the same standard of significance as before. More than three modal responses are never used and only rarely have more than two been found necessary.

The details of the percentage responses for the various items of the Study appear in Table 6. As will be seen, the criterion of plurality of 40% of responses holds exactly only for 11 items: 1, 2, 3, 5, 7, 10, 16, 19, 20, 21, and 24. Eight of these items are in full or partial agreement with the American criteria (Rosenzweig, Fleming and Clarke, 1947). Three (3, 16, and 20) are new to the Indian version—a result that is not surprising in view of cultural differences. In case of item No 9, the largest frequency is 38% (for E), the next largest frequency of 34% being for E. This result indicates that an aggressive response of some sort is to be expected here. To add to this expectation is the fact that the American criteria in this situation are E and e. For these reasons No. 9 was also included as a GCR criterion. The total number of criterion scores for GCR, as for the American version, are 12. Items 14 and 15 have been omitted, although there are frequencies of 39% in these situations. After careful consideration it was decided to have only 12 GCR criteria since it was felt that the two further items (14 and 15) would not contribute enough to the validity of the GCR rating to compensate for the difference that would be created from the American model.

GCR criterion scores appear in Table 6. The composite criteria based on the whole population of both sexes are generally used for the GCR calculation in a protocol. However, for some research purposes criterion scores for the particular sex group may be useful; these are also given in Table 6.

VIII

INTERPRETATION : GENERAL PRINCIPLES

The one fundamental question in connection with the interpretation of P-F Study protocols concerns the level of behaviour which finds expression in the responses (Rosenzweig, 1950). There is unfortunately no definitive answer at present to the question concerning the behavioural level from which the responses made by the subject issue. There are three possibilities in this connection. The response may represent (1) a self-critical attitude, resulting in the censoring of the answers in a way that may correspond only partially with what he would do in life situations of a frustrating nature; or (2) it may reflect what he would actually say in the frustrating situation; or (3) it may disclose a more covert or latent basis of the subject's manifest behaviour, i.e., he may respond in terms of this unconscious orientation at the time of frustration. For general purposes it is the second level of projectiveness which is assumed to have figured in the average P-F record. The subject functions as he observably would in the corresponding situation of everyday life, thus providing a sample of his gross behaviour (Rosenzweig, 1950, p. 64). It would, therefore, be reasonable to assume the second level in P-F responses. However, an attempt should be made to gain whatever insight one can into the level of response at the end of the inquiry. At that point the subject is asked of whom he was thinking in making the responses, and at the very end it is permissible to inquire whether he wrote that he himself would say in the situations or whether he thinks that the responses he gave are those he would actually make, etc. His replies to such an interrogation must naturally themselves be interpreted since they will represent rationalization as much as anything else, but it is better to ask one or two questions directly for what they may be worth than to deprive oneself completely of the limited advantages the procedure will yield. Generally, deep analysis or content analysis should be avoided, since the quantitative figures for various factors, GCR, trends, pattern, etc. give a fairly dynamic picture of the undercurrents of behaviour and since the P-F Study is presumably tapping the second level of behaviour. A complete interpretation for clinical purposes may, however, consider the content of the responses in respect of vocabulary choice, the differences in reaction according to whether the frustrator in the items is adult or child, and various other qualitative characteristics that might be open to confirmation from the context of the case history or of other psychological test results. Deeper clinical analysis will have to wait till research provides more insight into the nature of P-F responses. For most purposes formal, and quantitative aspects of the protocol should be sufficiently revealing.

The concepts on which the interpretation of results from the P-F Study depend have been expounded by Rosenzweig (Rosenzweig, 1945). The Score Sheet is the main basis of interpretation. It shows the frequencies and percentages of the various factors, the significance of which is interpreted with reference to the "norm" values appearing in the Manual. GCR, trends and the general pattern are also taken into consideration.

The various factors are to be interpreted according to their definitions or their apparent meanings (though there are different suggestions given by some investigators, regarding interpretation, especially see Bernard, 1949, 1949a). The total E-D score may be said to represent strength or weakness of the ego, while the N-P score may show adaptive adequacy. GCR may be regarded as "one measure of the individual's adjustment to a given group." The presence of many trends may indicate inadequate adjustment and instability.

EXAMPLE OF AN INDIVIDUAL RECORD

Let us take a sample case to illustrate the interpretation of an individual protocol (Figure 1). The GCR value is quite high (79%), showing an adequate level of adjustment of the subject to her group.

Among the categories, there is a strong deviation in O-D from the mean. The subject has a higher O-D score than the mean in her sex group by almost double the standard deviation. This result shows that she tends to be obsessed by the barrier causing frustration and may indicate "anxiety" and embarrassment. This is contributed by E' and I' both of which are higher than the mean by about 2.5 S.D. value. Moreover, the figure for E is lower than the mean by about 1 S.D. The subject does not blame a friend or a specific thing in the environment, but tends to direct blame to herself (figure for I being elevated by about 1.5 S.D.). She seems to make efforts not to blame others, but to take on the blame herself, more than necessary (high figure for I-D).

Low figures for N-P and M-A indicate that the subject tends to submit herself passively to the frustration, with not much expectation or effort toward solving the frustrating situation.

In the superego patterns there is a very significant deviation in the E; there is no E in the profile. This fact confirms the tendency to be very particular (to the extent of making efforts) not to deny personal responsibility.

The profile as a whole shows a highly developed super-ego with strong feelings of guilt. The guilt is reflected in the 4th and 5th trends. The subject tends to shift away from extrarotation towards introgression and impression during the course of testing. Her self-directed blame also seems to produce some guilt so that she moves away from E-D towards seeking solutions for frustration.

The total pattern indicates the predominance of E' (the obsession of the frustrating situation) followed by I (self-directed blame). These results confirm the observations made above.

This person is, therefore, conscientious, submissive, obsessed by frustrating situations, but superficially well-adjusted to her group; inclines to blame herself when frustrated and with the potentiality for developing a problem-solving orientation.

IX

SOME POSSIBLE USES OF THE P-F STUDY

Though the Adult Form of the P-F Study is meant for adults of both sexes, it can be used with adolescents also. It is designed for subjects aged 14 years and over.

The chief use of the P-F Study is clinical. It has been employed as a guide for diagnosis in psychiatric institutions, and with special groups, e.g., delinquents, stutterers, sexual offenders, suicidal cases, patients, the aged, physically handicapped, mentally retarded, etc.

The instrument is being increasingly used in cultural comparisons. Many and new techniques of this technique for the various nationalities are becoming available. So far the P-F Study has been adapted for Indian, Japanese, French, Italian and German populations. These versions, which follow closely the original instrument, will help in cross-cultural studies. In addition to these adaptations, the P-F has been used to study national, cultural and religious differences. There is considerable scope for such applications of the instrument in India. The P-F has been applied for industrial purposes, personnel selection, job adjustment, etc.

The P-F has been widely used for systematic research purposes. It has been utilized for exploring the various dimensions of projective techniques and also for understanding human motivation. In some researches both forms of the P-F Study can be used since these forms are roughly comparable. Though strict parallelism is not possible or even desirable, the comparability of the two forms was considered a reasonable objective. In 16 instances the parallelism is worth noting as follows: (A-Adult; C-Child): A1:C3; A2:C8; A4:C5; A5:C19; A6:C24; A7:C11; A8:C6; A10:C12; A11:C20; A13:C21; A15:C23; A17:C7; A18:C1; A19:C13; A22:C15; A24:C16. Because of the comparability of the two forms these can be used for special clinical or research purposes as complementary to each other.

Other details regarding the application of the P-F Study may be found in a paper by Pareek (1959b).
